PREFACE.

THE CORWIN GENEALOGY herewith given to the public is the result of the slow accumulation of material during many years. It only recently, however, became possible to arrange the earlier generations of the family of Matthias Corwin, of Long Island, in a sure and satisfactory manner. This was accomplished by the publication of Moore's Indexes of Southold, a few years since. A circular letter was then issued, and sent to every person connected with the family, whose address was ascertained, asking for such additional information as was necessary to complete the work. Probably few American families of the Corwin (Curwen or Corwine) name will experience much difficulty, with the material here presented, in making their own family record complete, if it be not already so in the present volume.

The work indeed contains the records of several Corwin families, originating from different American ancestors. The writer took it for granted at first, as several New-England authors have done, that the Salem and Long Island Corwins were probably connected. Under this supposition, he investigated, as opportunity permitted, the history of the English Curwens, of Cumberland County, whose Arms George Curwen, of Salem, Mass., had brought with him to America, in 1638. Yet it seemed a little remarkable that, if the Salem and Long Island families were related, all trace of such relationship should have been lost on both sides, though living not very distant from each other. But in 1859, when Appleton's New American Cyclopædia was publishing, it was noticed in a sketch of the Hon. Thomas Corwin, found therein, that the family was referred to an Hungarian origin. The article was written by the Hon. Anthony H. Dunlevy, of Ohio. (See Lucinda Corwin, 4, p. 142.) About the same time, a volume of speeches of Governor Corwin was published, to which was prefixed a memoir of him, by Isaac Strohm, of Ohio. Herein again, still more definitely, the same fact respecting the family's origin was stated. (Corwin's Speeches, p. 8.) The writer addressed Governor Corwin on the subject, and received the following reply :

LEBANON, OHIO, September 5, 1859.

DEAR SIR: When the publishers of the Encyclopædia advised me of their wish to insert in that work a brief sketch of my life, I was in haste to leave home, and handed their note to a friend, requesting him to correspond with the publishers, and give them, in his own way, what they wanted.

This gentleman had known me and my family intimately for fifty years. The result was the article to which you refer. He had given some attention to our family history, and I had not. There is in my hands, amongst much of such lumber, several letters showing our connection with the family of the Hungarian Corvinus. Somebody's history of Connecticut is referred to, I remember; and at the time I read these communications, their account of the matter struck me as quite plausible. I could never bring myself to feel interest enough in the subject to withdraw me from necessary labor long enough to make such researches as to enable me to form even a plausible guess as to the persons who might have been at work, for ten centuries back, in the laudable effort to bring me, nolens volens, into this breathing world on the 29th day of July, (a most uncomfortable time of the year,) in the year of grace 1794. I have seen the book you refer to.* I read a page or two of it, and it was captured by an aged aunt, who carried it away, and I have not seen it now for about five years. It was sent to me by a Mr. Ward, then of Staten Island, and I suppose it is the same you propose to send me. There was a likeness of Judge Curwen in the volume I had. Your researches† sent me, for which I thank you, are curious enough, and must have cost great labor and much time. . . . (But) I have resolved not to engage in that Battle of the Books. Nevertheless, had I the leisure, I dare say I should take as much delight in such inquiries as yourself. But my tastes have never had fair play. The actual affairs around me and upon me have driven me like a slave, through a very busy and very unprofitable life thus far. My paternal grandfather's name was Jesse; his father's name was William.‡ So says the family legend with us, and I believe the records so say.

I should like to know you personally. Can you tell me how I can find you, and when? I am again in that turbid water, politics. If you come to Washington next winter, you will find me amongst the monsters, big and little, that swim in that sea of troubles. Truly yours,

E. T. CORWIN.

THOMAS CORWIN.

Such statements from so distinguished an authority seemed worthy of further investigation. It was soon ascertained that there was a wide-spread tradition in the family concerning an Hungarian extraction. This tradition, indeed, did not extend to all branches; but it existed in various quarters. The writer has subsequently frequently heard of it in conversation, and there have been a number of references to it in letters. He has, therefore, felt himself obliged, though reluctantly, to relinquish his former cherished opinions of the relation of the Long Island family to the English Curwens. The results of his investigations in this matter,§ as well as the facts con-

§ Curiously enough, long after this volume was ready for the press, and two thirds of it actually printed, (April, 1872,) the writer received a note from George R. Curwen, Esq., of Salem, Mass., stating that an interesting record had just turned up in Salem, written upon cerning several later immigrants to America, of the Corwin or Curwen name, are presented in the INTRODUCTION.

The peculiar difficulties in the preparation of an American genealogy have been fully experienced in this work. The families are scattered from ocean to ocean, and from lake to gulf. They are often without any records of their remote origin, and "The Old Family Bible"* has often been carried the fly-leaf of an old book, formerly the property of Rev. George Curwin, (4,) p. 79, (being inscribed Georgii Curwin Liber, Anno 1715,) in his own handwriting, as follows:

Now, this "tree," without a word of explanation more than the names arranged as above, makes Thomas Curwin, the Quaker, Matthias Corwin, of Long Island, and George Curwin, of Salem, three original immigrants, though at different times, to be brothers, and the sons of a John Curwin, of England. Thomas and George may have been brothers, but the remarks already made, and the general tenor of the Introduction, will apparently quite forbid the placing of Matthias here. Probably this arrangement by Rev. George Curwin was a supposition, upon which he was beginning to work out a Curwin Genealogy; but his death soon after, (1717,) prevented him from either verifying or disproving the same. It seems impossible to allow such a record to overturn all the testimony which the reader will find respecting another origin of Matthias Corwin. We hope, however, that the truth may be elucidated. The writer would simply observe that the family of Matthias Corwin, on Long Island, have never possessed (so far as his knowledge extends) the Curwen Arms, which the family of George, both in the East and in the West, have cherished; that the early generations of these families are not known to have ever visited or even corresponded with each other. The name of Matthias might have become known to Rev. George, from the neighboring Ipswich records where it yet remains. Rev. George was but two years old when his grandfather died. Matthias moved from Ipswich to Long Island about the time of the birth of the first George's children, 1640; while Thomas does not, as far as known, appear in this country till forty or fifty years after the arrivals of George and Matthias.

* Says a writer in the New-Brunswick Review, 1855, Among time-honored customs, there is none more touching or instructive than that which employs the blank leaves of the "Old Family Bible" for genealogical records. In that consecrated place, between the Old and New Testaments, thereby acknowledging that true religion is the basis of the pure domestic relation, we place the records of our births, marriages, and deaths. And this is highly appropriate, as the Bible is the family record in general of all the children of Adam. It tells of the divine origin of our race, of the true aim of life, of our physical and moral destiny, and of our high dignity in the scale of animated and rational being. It tells how the lost image of God may be restored, and with it, every other capacity invigorated anew. For this very position of our "family records" seems to indicate that, while we trace our pedigree up to Adam, though not without many long breaks, we yet love to place it as near as possible to the genealogy of our Lord Jesus Christ. For while we acknowledge our relation off by daughters, and thus lost to the family name. Others, as is sometimes the case, care very little for such pursuits. Concerning the Salem family, extensive researches had already been made, and published in Curwen's Journal and Letters, and in the volumes of the Massachusetts Historical Society. The new material of the western branches of this family, under the name of Corwine, is here for the first time published and connected with the Salem ancestral stock. The Rev. Jacob Corwin, it is said, prepared a genealogy of the Long Island Corwins about the opening of this century, but his papers were burned.

The increase of the several families, classified according to generations, sexes, and surnames, is represented by the following tables :

A dozen, perhaps, of the sixth generation still survive, while a few of the tenth generation have come on the stage. The eighth is now in its prime. It will be noticed that few names of the female descendants of the fourth and fifth generations have been ascertained.

The Corwin families have been mostly engaged in agriculture, that great and unfailing source of national wealth. Not a few in each generation have also been pioneers on the ever-receding border, forcing the forests and help-to our first father, according to the flesh, yet as Christians, we value still more highly the new relation to a higher and better nature which now may be established, through faith, between us and the Second Adam, who is the Lord from heaven. For the first left us the legacy of sin and death; the Second waits to bestow on us the blessings of righteousness and eternal life.

ing to open up new States for the growing nation. Many have occupied positions in the various mechanical arts, in commerce, and in navigation. Yet the learned professions and the legislative halls of several States and of Congress have not been without representatives from this family. Many of the youth, also, are now engaged in seeking a liberal education, and preparing for increased usefulness. There have also been in every generation many devoted Christians, acting either as members or officers in almost all the various denominations.

The subject of genealogy is becoming increasingly interesting in America as time removes us further from the original settlers. It seems a misfortune that any of the old ante-revolutionary families of New-England should care so little for their fathers as to allow themselves to forget the stern virtues and noble courage which pervaded their souls. They were men of profound religious convictions, who, when they settled these shores, consecrated themselves and their children, to the latest generation, to the cause of truth and human liberty. They left homes which they loved because they were God's chosen ones, animated by his spirit with grand and holy principles, which are now beginning to be universally recognized as just, and which are diffusing their sacred leavening influences throughout the world. Should not each family, then, especially if descended from the Puritans, warmly cherish the memory of their fathers, and be stimulated by their history to a similar zeal for piety and liberty? The object of genealogy to an American should not be, indeed, chiefly to show what men call a noble rank. Mere hereditary rank, in itself considered, is certainly an illusion. But hereditary virtue, though, alas! it may sometimes leap over a generation, gives a divine patent of the truest nobility, better than all the blazonry of heralds' colleges. For while the Puritans were not without their faults, at which unbelief or bigotry loves to sneer, yet, all things considered, they were as noble a race of men as ever trod the earth. "The principles of New-England," says De Tocqueville, an unbiased foreign writer, "spread at first to the neighboring States; then they passed successively to the more distant ones, and at length they imbued the whole confederation." We see this now fulfilled on a still grander scale in the principles of universal liberty and political equality, which have at length become the common doctrine of our land. In all the battles, then, which are yet to be fought with error and corruption, let the descendants of New-England, wherever they have made their homes, be found on the side of Truth and Virtue, the unflinching and ever loyal champions of Right.

The writer would take this opportunity of thanking all who have in any way assisted him in the preparation of this work. He is under special obligations to Abel Corwin, of New-York City, who many years ago prepared the record of the descendants of David Corwin, No. 2; to Charles B. Moore, Esq., of New-York City, except for whose Index of Southold this work would hardly have been completed, and who has also most kindly aided him by correspondence; to Robert Corwin, Esq., of Dayton, Ohio, for much material concerning the Ohio Corwins; to Hon. Amos B. Corwine, of New-Rochelle, N. Y., for very full details concerning the Ohio Corwines; and to George R. Curwen, of Salem, Massachusetts, for frequent assistance in reference to the Salem Curwens, and for the plates of Judge Curwen, and the Curwen Arms; also partly for the lithograph of Workington Hall. He is also indebted to Mr. Comly, of Cincinnati, Ohio, who allowed him to procure impressions of the steel plate, in his possession, of the Hon. Thomas Corwin.

INTRODUCTION.

GENERAL.

THERE are several families of the name of Corwin, Corwine, or Curwen in the United States, the majority of whom are, no doubt, of English descent; while one of them, according to tradition and many corroborative circumstances, is said to be of remote Hungarian origin, though also, perhaps, for a time naturalized in England. This latter family is descended from MATTHIAS CORWIN, who was the first of this name in America. He is found settled at Ipswich, Massachusetts, in 1634, whence he removed to Southold, Long Island, in 1640. He came, it is said, from Warwick, England.

In 1638, GEORGE CURWIN (or CORWIN) came from Northampton, England, and settled at Salem, Massachusetts. In 1652, we find a SAMUEL CORWINE (or CURWIN) settled in Essex and Old Norfolk, in the same State. In 1676, THOMAS CURWIN and, perhaps, WILLIAM CURWIN, Quakers, are found at Boston. There then appear no new settlers of the name until 1784, when JOHN CURWEN, of Keswick, Cumberland, England, settled in Philadelphia or vicinity. Again, in 1844, MALCOLM CORWIN, of London, settled in New-York City. About 1868, CHARLES H. CURWEN, of Workington, Cumberland, England, went to Denver, Colorado, and subsequently removed to New-Orleans. (See these names in their appropriate places.)

THE NAME CORWIN.

This name, as used by the family of traditional Hungarian descent, is of Latin origin, being simply the Anglicized form of the Latin adjective Corvinus, derived from Corvus, a raven; but as used by the families of pure English descent, Corwin, or Corwine, is a corruption of Curwen, which latter form is itself a corruption of Cul-wen, a compound Celtic word, Cul-wen, meaning a white cowl or hood, such as monks used to wear. Neither of these names has any connection with the Welsh Corwen, (Cuer-wen, Cor-wenna, or Cor-owain,) with which Corwin has sometimes been confounded. The name has assumed various orthographies at different times and in different branches of these families, as follows:

The Continental Name.	The English Name.
Corvinius, (Latin form.)	Culwen, (Celtic or Saxon form.)
Corvin, (German.)	Curwen, (English.)
Corwin, "	Curwyn, "
Corwin, (English and American.)	Curwenne, }
	Corin, } (Irish orthographies.)
	Curran, }
	Corwine. }
Currin, { (Erroneous orthographies, ori-	Curwin, }
Curran, { ginating from the traditional	Curwin, }
Curwin, { Hungarian pronunciation.)	Curwen, } (American orthographies.)
	Corwine, }
	See note, p. xv.

Thus, these families have sometimes fallen upon the same orthography, although etymologically the names are very different. The Long Island family have never used Curwen or Corwine, but in a few instances Curwin, which was a tendency toward the true orthography from the Hungarian pronunciation of Corwin, which was Currin. On the other hand, the English Curwen name is found spelled Curwyn and Corwine, even in Great Britain; and in Ireland has been corrupted also into Corin and Curran.* In America, the two forms, Curwen and Corwine, are now used.

THE ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY OF MATTHIAS CORWIN.

Matthias Corwin is found settled at Ipswich, Massachusetts, in 1634,† whence, in 1640, he removed to Southold, Long Island. No original documents now exist, so far as the writer is aware, respecting the particular European origin of this family, though he has heard of such documents as having only recently existed. Although the name of Corvinus is very ancient, and of flattering celebrity in Roman history, all claims will be cheerfully waived as to any connection with that old patrician family. It may, however, be observed, that Marcus Valerius Messala Corvinus,‡ in connection with Augustus, was the last of the Roman consuls under the Republic, and a most excellent man, in an age of abounding corruption. Now, the Italian historians declare that the village of Corvinus, in Hungary,§ was thus named by one of the Greek emperors, out of respect to this worthy Roman. The modern surname Corvinus (Corvin, Corwin) is probably

* It is also known that the names of some recent Irish families in the United States, such as Kirwin, Curran, (or other names of similar sound,) are sometimes recorded in our city directories as Corwin, Corvin, Curvin, and Curwin. The writer has met with several such cases. They are generally Romanists in religion. Some of them, however, may be offshoots of the English Curwens, in very early times, or the names may have originated from other sources. Bernard Corvin and his cousin, Frank Corvin, came about 1850 to Philadelphia, Pa., from Ireland, but ultimately from Denmark. They may be of the continental Corvini. A few additional orthographies to the above lists, never used by the families, but simple clerical blunders in the records, are omitted, such as Curwinne, Curwine, Carwine.

† He probably came over a few years earlier, or about 1630.

‡ For the origin of the name Corvinus, and a few extracts about the Romans of that name, see Appendix A.

§ This in Hungary, now in Wallachia, Turkey, on the river Danube.

derived from this village. Corvinus is now a common name in Austria and Germany.*

Now, from this village, say some writers, sprang, in the fourteenth century, John Hunyadi, who was surnamed Corvinus. He was a famous warrior, and firmly held the Turks in check when they were designing to overrun all Europe. He was the commander at the celebrated battle of Belgrade, (1456,) when the Moslems left 24,000 of their men dead on the battle-field. He was honored with the title of the hero of Christendom.†

He was also the father of the still more celebrated Matthias Corvinus, under whose wise and liberal statesmanship Hungary reached the acme of her greatness. The proverb yet remains, "Matthias is dead and justice is gone!" He was elected to the high position, which he held for thirty-three years, (1458-1491,) by the votes of the nobles. They hoped that the ability of the father would not be wanting in the son, and they were not disappointed. Like his father, he was the firm bulwark of Europe against the Mohammedans. He was also a renowned champion of literature.‡

Now, tradition § reports that Matthias Corwin, the American immigrant, was not only of ultimate Hungarian extraction, but was also a descendant of this excellent and worthy man. Some branches of the family did not possess this tradition, while others have warmly cherished it. But the writer has not personally met with any original documentary or historical evidence by which he could indubitably verify the tradition. The mere identity of names, the American Matthias Corwin, and the Hungarian Matthias Corvinus, though striking, is not sufficient in itself. Two hundred and forty years have passed away since the family immigrated to America. Manuscripts of a merely private character would hardly survive so long, although such manuscripts are said ¶ to have existed recently on Long Island. These were, of course, unintelligible to Americans, and therefore, perhaps, not properly valued, or they may have been burned with Rev. Jacob Corwin's papers. It is also, probably, impossible to find in America the necessary works of reference to trace particularly and satisfactorily the successive links for the century which intervened between the death of the Hungarian Matthias, 1491, and the birth of the American Matthias, about 1590. Notwithstanding, we do know that persons of the name of Corvinus, or Corwin, are found scattered through Germany, reaching even to Hanover and Holland, during the sixteenth century, and that one named Matthias Corwin, descended, according to tradition, from the Hungarian

* The writer was informed of this fact by fellow-students, who fled their country in the Kossuth rebellion of 1848. The fact is also known from other sources.

† See Appendix B.

‡ See Appendix C.

§ See Corwin's Speeches, Dayton, Ohio, 1859, p. 8. In the memoir of Governor Corwin, prefixed to the above volume, the editor says, "The Corwin family originally immigrated to the American Colonies from Hungary, and, it is said, are traceable to the celebrated Matthias Corvinus of that country."

¶ David Corwin, of Brooklyn. See also Rev. Jacob Corwin's name, who prepared a genealogy about 1800, and the letter of Hon. Thomas Corwin, in the Preface. Also Appendix G.

Corvini, is found consorting with the English Puritans about 1630. It is also a well-known fact that the early American pronunciation of the Long Island Corwin name was Currin, and this is identical with the Hungarian pronunciation to this day of the Corvin name.*

Now, an American, while earnestly believing in the American political doctrines, may justly desire, as a matter of laudable curiosity or as a stimulus to duty, to know his origin and what circumstances brought him to his present condition and home. He may be justly inquisitive concerning the antecedents of his ancestors, especially if they have been on the side of freedom, education, and humanity. Otherwise, even if of royal extraction, he could derive no honor therefrom as an American, but might rather blush if obliged to show his pedigree. But Matthias Corvinus, of Hungary, though not without his faults, stands ever on the page of history as a bright and shining light, mitigating the persecutions which the Romish hierarchy enforced in his dominions, while he was a most zealous advocate of learning, and a pattern of wisdom and of kindness. It would not, therefore, be unpleasant or disgraceful to point back, if possible, to such an ancestor. But the writer has been unable to prove it, although tradition affirms it.

Taking it for granted, however, that at least the Hungarian extraction is true, the reasons of the exodus of the family from Hungary were, no doubt, partly religious and partly political. The name of the excellent Corvinus would naturally excite jealousy, while the later Corvini, with whose lives the writer has become somewhat acquainted, were, with few exceptions perhaps, Protestants. It is also well known that the Reformers in Hungary and Bohemia accomplished a great work before the reformation of Luther. Multitudes forsook the Roman Church, and, in the periodical intervals of restored papal power, those who escaped death fled their country. Very large numbers of Hungarians are known to have scattered, at these times of persecution, through Germany, Holland, and England.† Hungary and England also entered into peculiarly intimate relations in the early part of the sixteenth century, through the intermarriage of the royal families,‡ which, by the increased intercourse which thence sprung up, would greatly facilitate migrations of Hungarians to the latter country.

* In the Hungarian and Latin languages, the letter v is altogether wanting, (as in most of the languages of Europe,) the letter v or u (originally the same) taking its place. But this v or u, in Hungarian, is pronounced like the English w; while the o of that language is pronounced like the French eu, or the German u. (See Art. Hungarian Language, in Appletons' Cyclopedia, vol. ix., p. 365.) Therefore, the name Cörvin, in the language of Hungary, was pronounced Curwin, or Curien, or less accurately, Currin, or Curran. The form Curvinus is also found. Now, Currin was the popular pronunciation of Corwin, in America, down to a very recent time. and in some retired districts is not yet extinct. Plenty of documents, such as wills and deeds, attest the same. See Currin, Curran, Curwin, in Index. Savage, in his Genealogical Dictionary, says, "Often this name (Curvin) is written Corwin; sometimes Currin, to conform to sound." He supposed that this family was identical with the Curwen family of Salem. So also several other New-England writers on these subjects.

† See Ullman's Reformers before the Reformation, Gillett's Life of John Huss, and D'Aubigné's Hist. Reformation, v. p. 415. Also, Appendix D.

‡ The daughter of James I. married a Bohemian prince.

Now, it is well known that Matthias Corvinus had two sons, Ladislaus and John. The latter was born about 1470, and was yet living in 1540. He was placed under the tutorship of Anthony Bonfinius,* of Lucca, (Loccum,) Italy. In the next generation appears a Rev. Anthony Corvin, who studies at Loccum, and the circumstances would seem to suggest the probability of his being a son of John, and named after Bonfinius. He was born in 1501, and died in Hanover in 1553. He was driven from the cloister of Loccum in 1523, on account of his favor to the reformed doctrines. He went to Wittenberg, and became a celebrated preacher, reformer, and author.† During this same period, in 1540, there was a papal legate at the Council of Trent, by the name of Corvinus.‡ Skipping over the period of one generation, a John Corvinus again appears, born about 1560, who had a son, Arnold Corvinus, born about 1590. This John Corvinus may be identical with Rev. John Corvinus,§ who was a preacher at Dantzic (north-eastern Prussia) in 1621. The writer has been able to obtain but little information about this man, and would only add that the chronology is entirely suited to meet the facts, supposing he may have been the father of the American Matthias, as he was born about thirty years before the latter. If this be so, then Arnold Corvinus, the eminent jurist, may have been a brother of the American Matthias. But nothing positive is yet known on this subject.

In 1649, Arnold Corvinus published, at Amsterdam, Holland, Digests of the Law, in Aphorisms. Such a work required a man of remarkable legal learning. He had the degree of Juris utriusque Doctor, or doctor of both laws, the canon and the civil.|| In his days, also, there appeared a Corvinus in the Synod of the Reformed Churches, held at Dordrecht, (Dort,) Holland, in 1618, 1619.¶ Again, omitting a generation, we find a John Augustus Corvinus, an engraver, who was born in 1686, and died in 1738.

* Bonfinius published a life of Matthias and a genealogy of the Corvini, dedicating the latter to John. (See Article Bonfinius, in Chambers's Cyclopædia.) Bonfinius is, perhaps, the same as Anthony Bonvise, a merchant of Luke, (Lucca,) Italy. He was living in London in 1536 and 1535, being referred to in letters of Sir Thomas More, who calls him "the most beautiful and choice of all his friends." (C. B. Moore.)

† His life was written in 1749, by Baring, in the German language. See Appendix E.

§ See Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, (vol. iii. p. 388,) in which it is said, "In 1621, John Rathman, a pious and not unlearned minister of the Gospel at Dantzic, (north-eastern Prussia,) was thought by John Corvinus, his colleague, and by many others, to derogate from the majesty and efficacy of the Holy Scriptures." For in 1621, Rathman, in a German work on "Christ's Gracious Kingdom," said that, in addition to the written word of God, God must give an internal word to the soul before a man could experience regeneration. Corvinus and his associates contended that this was "mystical," etc.

¶ See History Synod of Dort. This may be the John Corvinus above alluded to.

 See Appendix F. It might also be remarked in passing that Pope Innocent IV., in 1245, and Saint Louis, in 1248, sent mendicant friars as missionaries among the Mongols, who had, in 1226, invaded Europe, under Ghengis Khan. And that, in 1289, John de Monte Corvino

He, of course, has nothing to do with the Matthias Corwin who came to America a half-century before his birth.

Thus, we find Corvini scattered from Hungary to the coasts of Holland during the century and a half succeeding the death of the renowned Matthias, (1491-1649.) We also know, from the general histories of the reformation period, that numbers of Hungarians fled to England. We know, in addition, that the descendants of Matthias Corwin, who came over with the Puritans, about 1630, claim to be of Hungarian origin, pointing even to the good and learned Matthias of Hungary as their ancestor. The writer here leaves this branch of the subject to those who may care to prosecute it further.*

There are a few traditions, also, which refer the Long Island Corwins, to a German and even to a Welsh origin. (See Jesse, 1.) The tradition of the German origin can easily be explained, as many of the Corvini lived in Germany.† For a similar reason, they might be called English. The idea of a Welsh origin, perhaps, arose from noticing the town called CORWEN, in Merionethshire, Wales. Upon inquiry, by letter, of the parish clergyman of that place, as to the origin of the name of that town, and whether any Corwin families now lived there, or ever had, the following courteous reply was received:

THE RECTORY, CORWEN,‡ WALES, }
December 29, 1870. }

REV. AND DEAR SIR: I have much pleasure in answering your letter about the supposed meaning of the word Corwen. The received opinion translated the New Testament and Psalms into the Tartar language. (Appleton's Cyclopædia, Art. Foreign Missions, vol. xi. p. 569.)

* The writer was also assured, several years since, by a member of the family, that Kosuth, when in this country, in 1848, alluded in some of his speeches to the emigration of descendants of Matthias Corvinus to America. In the same year there was also one of those not uncommon excitements in some portions of the family about a European estate awaiting the heirs of Corvinus. It subserved, at least, the good purpose of reviving and strengthening fast-dying traditions. See some letters on the subject in Appendix G.

† Daniel Corwin, of Howells, Orange Co., N. Y., informed the writer that a woman of the name of Corwin, ninety years of age, informed him, (while on a visit to Southold, about 1810-20,) that the Corwins were of German descent. She herself was a native of Germany.

‡ The Celtic *Cæ*r, or Car, is also said to mean camp, or fort. (Webster's Dictionary, p. 1626.)

Corwen, Merionethshire, Wales, is a town, and the seat of a poor-law union, in the Parish of Corwen, and in the Hundred of Edernton. It is situated on the right bank of the Dee. Population in 1851, 2069. The living is a sinecure rectory in the archdeaconry of Montgomery and diocese of St. Asaph. Corwen poor-law union contains 15 parishes and townships, and a population of 15,409. It is a small, neat town. Its situation above the river imparts to it a pleasant appearance, and also contributes to its celebrity. The town is supplied with water. Corwen is regarded with interest by the Welsh, as the scene of victories over the English—one in 1165, by Owen Gwynedd, over Henry II., and the other by Owen Glyndwr, over Henry IV. In the vicinity of Corwen, a British or Welsh post existed. It consisted of a circular wall, one and a half miles in circumference, on the summit of a steep hill, and a circular habitation, now in ruins, within the inclosure. The parish church, a neat cruciform building, stands in a picturesque situation, immediately at the foot of a rocky precipice, forming part of the Berwyn mountains. The Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists, Baptists, and Independents, also here exist. There is a parochial school of about fifty here is, that Corwen is so called from the Welsh words Caer-wen—that is, white stone, descriptive of the rocks at the back of the town; or from Cor-wenna, a daughter of Brannas, a Welsh prince who lived in the neighborhood; or from Cor-owain—that is, Owen Glyndwr's choir. No family of the name of Corwin live anywhere in these parts.

I am, Rev. and dear sir, your faithful servant,

THE REV. E. T. CORWIN.

WILLIAM RICHARDSON.

MATTHIAS CORWIN, THE AMERICAN IMMIGRANT.

Among the earliest settlers of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, we find a Matthias Corwin, (pronounced Currin.) The Commoner's Record, at Ipswich, yet preserved, says, "Given and granted to Matthias Currin, two acres of land, lying unto his house, on the east end thereof, to him, his heirs, and assigns," etc. This was in 1634, and seems to be a second grant of land. The name in the same records is also spelled Curwin, and they note, concerning him, that he finally removed to Southold, Long Island.* The first grant was probably the fifty or two hundred acres given to all the first settlers.† It is said that he came from Warwick, England.‡

These settlers of Ipswich came under the lead and governorship of John Winthrop. That the circumstances of that settlement may be understood, permit a condensed statement to be given from Bancroft's History of the United States:

Rev. Mr. White, a minister of Dorchester, in the south of England, a Puritan, but not a separatist, breathed into the attempted settlement at Cape Ann (1624) a higher principle than the mere desire of gain. Roger Conant obtained the agency of the adventure, (1625.) The attempt at Cape Ann failed. But Conant, confiding in the active friendship of White, made choice of Salem as a convenient place of refuge for the exiles for religion, and he and his companions remained as the sentinels of Puritanism on Massachusetts Bay.

The desire of a plantation was now ripening in the mind of White and his associates in the south-west of England. About the same time, some friends in Lincolnshire fell into discourse about New-England, (1627;) and children, and also a reading-room. Corwen possesses an endowed hospital for widows of clergymen. (See Parry's Cambrian Mirror; Cliffe's Book of North Wales; Land we Live in, vol. iii.; Zell's Encyclopædia.)

* These facts are also all presented in Felt's History of Ipswich. The writer visited Ipswich in July, 1870.

† Each adventurer who took £50 stock in the Massachusetts Company was to receive 200 acres, or 50 acres if he took no stock, but simply transported himself and family. Fifty additional acres, however, were given for every person, additional to the family, whom any of the immigrants brought over.

‡ This tradition was brought to light in the excitement, in 1848, about the Austrian estate. The writer is not aware of the ultimate authority of the tradition, and can not pronounce either for or against it. (See letter of Irena Husted, in Appendix G.)

from London, Lincolnshire, and the west-country, men of fortune and religious zeal, merchants and country gentlemen, offered the help of their purses to advance the glory of God, (1628,) by planting a colony of the best of their countrymen on the shores of New-England. To facilitate the grant of a charter from the crown, they sought the concurrence of a Council of Plymouth, (England,) for New-England; they were befriended in their application by the Earl of Warwick, and obtained the approbation of Sir Ferdinando Gorges; and on March 19th, 1628, the Council conveyed to Sir Henry Roswell, Sir John Young, Thomas Southcoat, John Humphrey, John Endicott, and Simon Whetcomb, a belt of land extending three miles south of the River Charles, and three miles north of every part of the River Merrimack, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean. The grantees associated to themselves Sir Richard Saltonstall, Isaac Johnson, Matthew Cradock, Increase Nowell, Richard Bellingham, Theophilus Eaton, William Pynchon, and others; of whom nearly all united religious zeal with a capacity for vigorous action. Endicott was made governor. He arrived in September, 1628, and united his own party and those who had formerly been planted there into one body, amounting to fifty or sixty persons altogether. With these he founded Salem. Thomas Walford, a blacksmith, already dwelt at Charlestown, and William Blackstone, an Episcopal clergyman, a courteous recluse, lived on the opposite peninsula, (Boston,) while Samuel Maverick, himself a prelatist, son of a pious Nonconformist minister, of the west of England, was at East-Boston; all within the bounds of the new Massachusetts Bay Colony.

After the departure of the emigrant ship from England, (1628,) the company, counseled by White, an eminent lawyer, and supported by Lord Dorchester, obtained from the king a confirmation of their grant. On the second of March, 1629, a new offer of "Boston men," that promised good to the plantation, was accepted; and on the fourth of the same month, the broad seal of England was put to the letters-patent of Massachusetts Bay. The freedom of Puritan worship was the purpose and the result of the colony.

The company was authorized to transport to its American territory any persons, whether English or foreigners, who would go willingly, would become lieges of the English king, and who were not forbidden.

In April, 1629, the new embarkation was far advanced. The company was directed to make plentiful provision of godly ministers, as the propagation of the Gospel was their professed aim in settling. One of these was Samuel Skelton, of Clare Hall, Cambridge, under whose preaching Endicott had sat. Another was Francis Higginson,* of Jesus College, Cam-

* Revs. Higginson, Skelton, and Bright came over to America in 1629, (being silenced ministers in England,) and with them came over sundry honest and well-affected people, in several ships, which were engaged to transport planters to New-England, all of whom arrived alive and safe at Naumkeag, (Salem,) Mass., intending to settle a plantation there. (Hubbard's Hist. New-Eng., 112.)

Higginson came over in ship Talbot, (Captain Thomas Beecher,) and he is called the father and pattern of the New-England clergy. His relation of the voyage is printed in bridge. Deprived of his parish in Leicester for nonconformity, he received the invitation to conduct the emigrants as a call from heaven. Two other ministers were added as missionaries to the Indians.

The party included also six shipwrights, and an experienced surveyor, who, with Samuel Sharpe, master gunner of ordnance, was to drill the company at appointed times. A great store of horses, cattle, and goats was put on ship-board. Higginson called his children, as the ship was receding from Land's End, and bade them look, for the last time, on their native country, not as the scene of sufferings from intolerance, but as the home of their fathers and the dwelling-place of their friends. They did not say, "Farewell, Babylon! Farewell, Rome!" but "Farewell, dear England!" "On the Sabbath, they added preaching twice, and catechising; and twice they faithfully kept solemn fasts. The passage was quiet and Christian-like; for even the ship-master and his religious company set their eight and twelve o'clock watches with singing a psalm, and with prayer that was not read out of a book."

In the last days of June, 1629, the little band of two hundred arrived in Salem. The old and new planters numbered about three hundred, besides women and children. They believed themselves to be chosen emissaries of God, the favorites of heaven, selected to light in the wilderness the beacon of pure religion. Mr. Skelton was chosen pastor, and Mr. Higginson, teacher, and were consecrated by the imposition of hands of some of the flock. Mr. Higginson wrote a glowing description of New-England, which went through three editions in a few months, and many letters were sent back to friends by the colonists. While former attempts to colonize, from motives of gain, had failed, this effort could not, since their object was purity of religion. They purposed to form a peculiar government, and to colonize only the best.

In July, 1629, Matthew Cradock, the governor of the company, proposed to transfer the government of the company to the emigrants. This led several persons of worth and quality, wealthy commoners, zealous Puritans, to think about casting their destinies with the American colonists. Twelve men, of large fortunes and liberal culture, on the 26th of August, 1629, among whom were John Winthrop, Isaac Johnson, Thomas Dudley, and Richard Saltonstall, offered to bind themselves to each other, that if the government of the colony were thus transferred to America, they would emigrate. On the 29th, the transfer took place. Thus the commercial corporation became the germ of a commonwealth. John Winthrop was chosen governor. Of the stock of the company, nine tenths was sunk in the first year. Cradock furnished two ships. The Eagle was purchased, and its name changed to Arbella.* From the resources of the emigrants, Hutchinson's Collection of Papers. 1630. London. Neal's Puritans, i. 300, 301. Harper's edition, N. Y. 1843.

* Mr. Drake, in his early History of New-England, gives the passenger-lists of about fifty or sixty ships which brought some of the early settlers to New-England; but the name of Matthias Corwin is not found among those yet published. We understand that additional passenger-lists of the Puritan emigrants are about to be published in England.

seventeen vessels, during 1630, brought over about a thousand souls. About seven hundred others, not conformists, yet not separatists, many of them men of high endowments and large fortunes; scholars well versed in the learning of the times; clergymen, who ranked among the best educated of the realm, embarked with Winthrop in eleven ships, bearing with them the charter of their liberties. They arrived in June, 1630, at Salem, and afterward settled at Boston. The west-country men, who, before leaving England, had organized their church, with Maverick and Warham for ministers, and who, in a few years, were to take part in calling into being the commonwealth of Connecticut, were found at Nastasket, where they had landed just before the end of May. Some of the emigrants remained in Salem; some founded Lynn. William Coddington, of Boston, England, settled on the peninsula, since called Boston. Malden, Watertown, Roxbury were also founded. Ludlow and Rossiter, with the men from the west of England, settled South-Boston.

On the 5th of February, 1631, the ship Lyon, from Bristol, arrived, laden with provisions, and twenty passengers. In 1631, only ninety came over. In 1632, only two hundred and fifty. In April, 1631, Roger Williams began to preach at Salem. In the same month, the Indians of Connecticut invited a colony to their river. In July, 1633, the ship Griffin brought over two hundred passengers. Among them was Haynes, Cotton, and Hooker. In 1634, the bay of Massachusetts was thronged with squadrons.*

Now, some of these settlers came over from London, Lincolnshire, and the west-country, about 1630. These persons are expressly said to be those who afterward took part in the settlement of Connecticut, whither Matthias Corwin went in 1640, though these west-countrymen at first remained for a while in South-Boston. The west-country might refer to Warwick, especially as the Earl of Warwick was a special friend of the enterprise. The company was also to convey either Englishmen or foreigners. There is, therefore, some probability that Matthias Corwin came over as early as 1630, while we find his name among the inhabitants of Ipswich in 1634. His name is not in the imperfect list of the first ten † who went there in March, 1633; but in 1634, he received a second grant of land. He was a freeman of the place.

John Winthrop, Jr., purchased Agawam, (the Indian name of Ipswich,) of the Indian chief Masconomet, for £20, in 1638. The numbers of this settlement were soon increased by additions from abroad. Rev. Nathaniel Ward, ‡ persecuted by Bishop Laud, arrived in June, 1634, in which year "fourteen great ships arrived at Boston and Salem." The passengers of at least two of these ships were expressly designed for Agawam. They arrived in August, and at once changed the name of the place to Ipswich,* because of the great kindness which they had received at Ipswich, England, when embarking for their distant home. Rev. Mr. Ward was chosen preacher, and Rev. Mr. Parker,† who had already been preaching there, was chosen teacher. The next year, the latter removed to Newbury, and Revs. Thomas Bracey and John Norton took his place. In 1636, Mr. Ward resigned on account of ill health, but continued to reside in Ipswich; and Rev. Nathaniel Rogers succeeded him in February, 1637.

Ipswich was, at this time, one of the most intellectual and refined towns in the colony. An unusual proportion of the people were persons of wealth and education. Four members of the colonial government resided here, namely, Bellingham, Saltonstall, Bradstreet, and Symonds. Ipswich was also one of the most beautiful of the sea-board towns, resembling the charming rural scenery of Dorsetshire. Mr. Ward, on returning to England in 1646, says that in the twelve years of his residence there, he had only heard one oath, had only seen one man drunk, and had only heard of three bad women.

Cotton Mather, in 1638, at the time of Mr. Rogers's ordination at Ipswich, says, "Here was a renowned church, consisting mostly of such illuminated Christians, that their pastors in the exercise of their ministry might, in the language of Jerome, 'Perceive that they had not disciples, so much as judges.'" Johnson remarks, 1646, "The peopling of this town is by men of good rank and quality, many of them having the yearly revenue of much land in England before they came to this wilderness. But their estates being employed for Christ, and left in bank, they are well content till Christ shall be pleased to restore it again to them or theirs, which, in all reason, should be out of the prelates' hands in England."

They had been so greatly persecuted by the prelates that they were forced to emigrate. Some of these pilgrims were merchants. Many of them were among the most estimable of their parishioners, whom the clergymen brought over with them from England.‡

Ipswich increased rapidly in wealth. In 1633, the town was assessed only £8, but the next year £50. After this, however, they were yet obliged to use bullets for farthings. Persons were not allowed to use tobacco under a penalty of 2s. 6d. §

But no sooner was a settlement formed, than it began to send out emigrants to form new ones. This process began in Ipswich in 1635. In 1641, several families in Lime and Ipswich, "having proposed to inhabit

* The town of Ipswich, England, derives its name from the river Gipping, and was, in the time of the Saxons, called Gippeswic, now corrupted into Ipswich. This town suffered from persecution during the reformation. Its history was written by John Glyde, Jr., and published at Ipswich, England, 1850.

† In May, 1634, Rev. Thomas Parker, of Wiltshire, England, became a resident of Ipswich. He preached much that the "emigrants had come over for good reasons, and that God would multiply them, as he did the children of Israel." He remained only one year. (Felt's Ipswich, 216.)

Long Island, their leaders are called before the General Court, and persuaded from proceeding any further, because it would strengthen the Dutch, whom Winthrop called 'doubtful neighbors.'” Matthias Corwin had left in the preceding year.*

In 1637, the Pequot war occurred in Connecticut, causing much suffering to the first settlers there, who had gone from Massachusetts. As early as 1631, Seguin, the Indian Sagamore of the Connecticut Valley, requested Governor Winthrop to send a colony thither. Individuals from Devonshire, Dorsetshire, and Somersetshire, England, had located at Dorchester, Mass., in 1630, under Rev. John Warham as pastor, and Rev. John Maverick as teacher. Roger Ludlow and Henry Wolcott were in this company. Sir Richard Saltonstall's people, the same year, settled at Watertown, Mass., under the care of Rev. Mr. Philips. In 1632, a congregation, under the lead of Rev. Thomas Hooker, of Chelmsford, Essex, England, settled at Cambridge, Mass., and were joined by certain others from Weymouth, Mass. These parties applied, as early as 1634, for permission to remove to Connecticut; but their request was denied. The next year, their renewed request was reluctantly granted.

Thus Hartford, Windsor, and Wethersfield were settled in the spring of 1636. But the most distinguished company of emigrants that ever came to New-England, arrived in Boston, from London, July 26, 1637. Their pastors and leaders were Rev. John Davenport, a preacher of London; Governor Theophilus Eaton, a wealthy merchant, and others. They proceeded to Connecticut, and founded New-Haven, April 18th, 1637. In January, 1639, they framed a written constitution, the first example of such a thing in history. “There, by the influence of Davenport, it was resolved that the Scriptures were the only perfect rule of a commonwealth. A committee of twelve was selected to choose seven men qualified for the foundation-work of organizing the government. Eaton, Davenport, and five others were ‘the seven pillars’ for the new house of wisdom in the wilderness. As neighboring towns were planted, each was likewise a house of wisdom, resting on its seven pillars, and aspiring to be illuminated by the Eternal Light. The pleasant villages spread along the Sound, and on the opposite shore of Long Island.”† About this time, or shortly after, Matthias Corwin left Ipswich, and came to New-Haven.

At New-Haven arrived soon after Rev. John Youngs, a minister from Hingham, Norfolkshire, England, with a part of his congregation. On October 21st, 1640, he reorganized his church, and removed to Southold, ‡

* One very direct tradition says he went first to Saybrook, in Connecticut, about the time that the Rev. Mr. Hooker settled Hartford. Felt says (p. 72) that it is unknown what became of many of these emigrants from Ipswich, though he tells what became of Corwin. So also Farmer's Register.

† Bancroft's U. S. i. 404. In Felt's Ipswich, p. 55, we read that Rev. Mr. Davenport also directed the brethren at Ipswich to nominate eleven of their most godly men for church pillars, out of which the seven pillars of wisdom were to be chosen.

‡ Although Rev. Mr. Youngs and his colony came from Hingham, Norfolkshire, yet their Long Island, where Captain Howe and other Englishmen had purchased of the Indians a large tract of land. * This little colony remained in union with New-Haven, though they reluctantly yielded to the rule that none but church members should hold office. Says Trumbull in his History of Connecticut, vol. i., p. 119, "Some of the principal men (of Southold) were Rev. Mr. Youngs, William Wells, Barnabas Horton, Thomas Mapes, and Matthias Corwin." † The other parties who made up this Southold colony were Peter Hallock, Richard Terry, Robert Akerly, Jacob Corey, John Conkline, Isaac Arnold, and John Budd. ‡

Says Hinman in his Settlers of Connecticut, p. 726, "Matthias Corwin was one of the leading men of Southold in its first settlement. . . . It was first called Yennecock. . . . Many of the first planters came with Rev. John Young, from Hingham, Norfolkshire, England. Mr. Young stood at the head of the civil and religious affairs,§ aided by Corwin, Wells, Tut-hill, Horton, and others of his church. The name of Corwin was not strictly a Connecticut name, but only at the time Southold was under the jurisdiction of the Connecticut colony." We see from the above facts that Matthias Corwin took part in the settlement of at least two towns in New-England, namely, Ipswich and Southold, and perhaps three. For it is not certain whether the reference in Hollister's work,|| which places him among the founders of New-Haven, refers to New-Haven proper or to Southold, which was then in the colony of New-Haven. He had lived about six years at Ipswich, and he spent the eight remaining years of his life at Southold. His will may be found in the town records of that place. He was also, at times, a director of town affairs. In a description of his pro-new town was called Southold, and their county Suffolk, no doubt after Southwold, Suffolk-shire, England. The band is said to have sailed from Yarmouth, Norfolkshire.

† This passage from Trumbull is quoted by Barber in his History of New-Haven, and by Lambert and Hinman in their histories of Connecticut.

‡ John Ketcham became a citizen of Southold in 1648. He also was from Ipswich, like Matthias Corwin. (Moore's Southold, p. 253.)

§ The following are the pastors at Southold and Mattituck until the Revolution: Rev. John Youngs was pastor at Southold, 1640-72; Rev. Joshua Hobart, from Boston, 1674-1717; Rev. Benjamin Woolsey, 1720-36; Rev. James Davenport, 1738-46; Rev. William Troop, 1748-56; Rev. John Storrs, 1763-76; again, 1782-87. At Mattituck, Rev. Joseph Lamb, 1717-49; Rev. Joseph Parks was pastor, 1752-56; Rev. Nehemiah Barker, 1756-72; Rev. Jesse Ives, 1772-3; Rev. John Davenport, 1775-7; Rev. Benjamin Goldsmith, 1777-1810.

perty three years before his death, (1655,) no less than nineteen plots of land are described as belonging to him, situated in Southold, on the northern shore, on Tom's Creek, toward the north-west and the north-east, at Oyster Pond, toward the south-west, at Pechaconnicke River, and at Corchack, (Cutchogue.) His will mentions¹ John,* Martha, and Theophilus as his children, all of whom seem to have been of age at the writing of his will in 1658. Hence they were probably born at Ipswich, before 1637, or possibly some or all of them in England still earlier. The families of the two sons were large, embracing seven or eight children each, all of whom continued to reside at Southold or immediate vicinity. The names of John's children are positively known by his will, which has also been found.† The other names therefore of the third generation, which are recorded in the census list of 1698, must belong to the family of Theophilus. Most of these removed eight or ten miles west of Southold, to Mattituck.

In the fourth generation removals from the Island began to be made, though to a very limited extent, until the breaking out of the Revolution. Before that event, however, Amaziah, 1, had removed to Maryland, about 1750; Jesse, 2, to Connecticut, about 1760; Theophilus, 4, to Orange Co., N. Y., about 1760; Gilbert, 1, to Rockland Co., N. Y., about 1768; while David, 2, in his old age, accompanied his children to Orange Co., N. Y., about the opening of the war. But with the Revolution removals became frequent. That really broke up the family on Long Island.

In April, 1775, a meeting was held at Southold, to secure the signatures of those who would support Congress. The list is preserved and printed in the Calendar of Revolutionary Papers. In May, the paper was carried around to get the signatures of those not present at the meeting. About 223, in the little town of Southold, L. I., agreed to support Congress, while only 40 declined. Among those who signed were most of the Corwins. (See Index, Revolution.)

After the battle of Long Island, 1776, great consternation seized the people of Suffolk County. The American army being obliged to abandon the island, the more prominent Whigs of Suffolk County fled across the sound to Connecticut, carrying with them what they could, leaving their houses and farms to the enemy. The convention aided the removals. Many of these joined the American army. Some crossed over to the Hudson River and settled in Orange County, N. Y., while others afterward returned to the Island. (Prime's Long Island, p. 65. Onderdonk's Revolutionary Incidents in Kings and Suffolk Counties, L. I.)

Among those who never returned were James, 1, who settled near Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y.; William, 1, his brother, and a Benjamin, who settled near Chester, Morris Co., N. J.; Joshua and Eli, with their father

* Several of the inhabitants of Southold consented to be made free of this colony, unless any thing appear to interrupt the same. Among these was John Corwin, 1662. (Col. Rec. of Ct.)

† This was found by Charles B. Moore, Esq., of New-York, and kindly furnished to the writer.

David, who settled near Scotchtown, Orange Co., N. Y., while their brother Phineas removed to Central New-York ; Stephen went to Essex Co., N. J., near Springfield, and subsequently to Ohio ; while Jesse, already in Connecticut, had, about 1767, removed to the vicinity of Flanders, Morris Co., N. J., and about the opening of the war proceeded to Fayette Co., Pa., and in 1789 to Bourbon Co., Ky.

Since this first general scattering, the migrations have continued in every direction for a century, but the reader is referred to the particular names for further information. New-York State has always been the chief home of the family, especially the counties of Suffolk, Orange, Sullivan, Ulster, Cayuga, and other counties in Central New-York. New-Jersey has had the next share, perhaps, especially Morris County. Ohio stands next, until now fully three fourths of the States have members of this family for citizens. They are found in each of the New-England States, excepting Maine, and in all the others, except, perhaps, Utah, Nevada, Delaware, and West-Virginia.* (See Index.)

Not a few college graduates, clergymen, lawyers, and doctors are also found in this family record. Judges are here, and legislative members in various States. One has been a governor, a member of the President's cabinet, and an ambassador to another nation, while others have been members of Congress. (See Index.)

THE ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY OF GEORGE CURWEN.

Captain George Curwen came from Northampton, England, and settled at Salem, Massachusetts, in 1638. He was descended from the ancient Curwen family† of Workington,‡ Cumberland, England, bringing over with him memorials of such descent, such as a seal with the Curwen arms, etc. The English family have written their name Curwen since about 1433. Before that time, it was Culwen, which name was assumed about 1140, from a Scotch source. Hutchinson, in his History of Cumberland County, gives the records of this family back to the reign of Elthelred, about A.D. 870. John de Talbois is the earliest ancestor named, and his descendant Gospatric, of the fifth generation, was the first Lord of Workington. He was thus named from his maternal grandfather. Gospatric's son, Thomas, received by gift, from one Rowland, the lordship of Culwen.

* The name has been incorporated in the geography of the country, as follows :

- Corwin, a township of Ida Co., Iowa. Population, 200.
- Corwin, a village of Warren Co., O.
- Corwinville, a village of Lorain Co., O.
- Corwin, a railroad station in Morris Co., N. J.
- Curwinville, a village in Clearfield Co., Pa. Population, 455.
- Corwin, a village in ——— Co., O.
- New-Corwin, Highland Co., O.

One of the steamers of the United States marine is called "Corwin," after Governor Corwin.

† For a sketch of this English family, see Appendix H.

CURWEN HOUSE, SYDNEY

Thomas died in 1152, and his eldest son, Thomas, before his father. In the mean time Patric, the second son, had received from his father the lordship of Culwen, and married the heiress of Culwen. In a cartulary (or church record) of St. Begh's, in the Earl of Oxford's library, "Thomas, son of Gospatric, gives, among other benefactions," to Patric, his son, "Salinum in Culwen," or a salt-pit in Culwen. Here Patric expected to make his home. But his elder brother dying without issue, Patric removed to Workington Hall, retaining, however, his new name, Patric de Culwen, which his posterity (lords of Workington) changed into Curwen.*

The origin and meaning of Culwen is somewhat under dispute. Some think that it comes from Culdees. Mr. Toland says, "That the old Culdees were a sort of lay religious, who had the power of electing their own bishops or superintendents, and that they were so named from their original Irish or ancient Scottish word ceilede, signifying separated or espoused to God." † But George Buchanan, well versed in Irish lore, explains the word by Dei Cultores, or worshipers of God.

The short story of these monks is, that they were of the Irish rule, carried into Scotland by St. Columba, and thence dispersed into the northern parts of England. They were so named from the black habit ‡ which they wore; for Culdee § signifies as plainly a black monk, from the color of his hood or cowl, as Culwen signifies a white one, from the white cowl worn. John Leland mentions two rivers, illustrative of the meaning of these words, Clar-duy, or black clar, and Clar-wen, or white clar. ||

This Culwen was on the sea-coast in Galloway, (county Kirkcudbright, Scotland,) and had its name from a neighboring rock, which was thought to resemble a white monk.

This Curwen family, in the direct line of eldest sons, has several times failed, when some younger branch succeeded. A little less than a century ago, with the death of Sir Henry Curwen, a single daughter, Isabella, was

* It is sometimes found in the form of Curwenne. Hugh Curwen, Archbishop of Dublin, wrote it also Corin. His nephew, Philip, the converted friar, wrote it Corwine. The celebrated Irish barrister wrote it Curran. (See Appendix H.)

Campbell.

§ The word Culdee is explained in many different ways. The least satisfactory is its derivation from the Latin Cultores Dei, or worshipers of God. Culdee was, no doubt, Latinized into Colidei. Cul, however, may be etymologically connected with the Latin cucullus, a hood or cap, and with the provincial German Kogel, gugle, and Anglo-Saxon cuhle, cugle, cugele, all of the same signification, namely, a cowl. Ehrard gives Kile De, a man of God. Braun gives Gille De, a servant of God. A later authority gives Cuildich, (as used by the Celts,) a secluded corner, referring to the life of a recluse. Culdee became at length a general term for the whole Celtic church. These people had a simple Bible Christianity, and seem to have been models of piety in every respect. They anticipated Augustine in introducing Christianity into Britain. Their history has been frequently written. (See Herzog's, McClintock's, and other encyclopedias on Culdee and Iona.)

left heiress of all her father's vast estate. She married John Christian, Esq., of the Isle of Man, who, upon receiving a conveyance of the estate in 1790, assumed the arms and name of the Curwens, and has left a numerous family. The present head of the family, in England, is Edward Stanley Curwen.* There were also Curwens in Yorkshire, England, in 1612 and 1665. Eight names are mentioned in a list of pedigrees contained in William Paver's Consolidated Visitations of Yorkshire, being taken in the above years. (N. E. Ant. and Gen. Reg. xi. p. 265.)

GEORGE CURWIN, THE AMERICAN IMMIGRANT.

Captain George Curwin or Corwin,† who was born in England, December 10, 1610, settled at Salem, Massachusetts, in 1638. His father's name has recently been discovered to be John, (see Preface, p. 3,) but the links uniting them with the Workington family have not yet been ascertained. But Sir Christopher Curwen, who died in 1491, besides his eldest son, Sir Thomas, had by a second wife five sons, namely, John and William, who were priests, Robert, Edward, and George. Their mother was Anne, daughter of Sir Roger Pennington, of Pennington and Mancaster. The dates of their births would, therefore, be about 1450-70. Now, Robert was a merchant of Workington, and traded largely with Virginia, (that is, America,) and possibly some of his descendants may have settled there.‡ The name of Rev. Thomas Curwen is found in Bridges's county history of Northampton, in the century preceding the emigration of George to Ame-

† Captain George, the first settler of the name at Salem, generally wrote his surname Corwin, but always used the arms of the Curwens, of Workington Hall. His son, John, wrote Corwin and Curwin, while his brother, Jonathan, wrote Corwin. George, son of this John, wrote Corwin and Curwen. Rev. George, son of Jonathan, wrote Corwin and Curwin; while Rev. George's sons, Samuel and George, wrote Corwin during their minority, but afterward Curwen, to which latter orthography their branch of the family have adhered; but the descendants of John have adhered to Corwin or Corwine. (George R. Curwen, Salem, Mass.)

In N. E. Hist. Reg. ix. 368, the name of George, the first settler, is once Corwine.

‡ This is a suggestion of Rev. Alfred F. Curwen, now of Harrington, England, (son of Edward Stanley Curwen,) who communicated the above names, which are not found in the county histories.

* A brief explanation of these heraldic terms may be seen in Webster's Dict., p. 1712.

rica, and who may be George's grandfather.* George died in 1685, at Salem, leaving a large estate. [GEORGE, (1).]

He came to America, like Matthias Corwin, under the auspices of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. He and his descendants were united in marriage with some of the principal families of the colony. The branch of his family which descended from his son Jonathan became extinct, as to male heirs, about the beginning of this century, when Samuel Curwen Ward, (grandson of Richard Ward and Mehetable Curwen,) at the request of Samuel Curwen, (a great-uncle, who died in 1802,) assumed the name of Curwen, by an act of the Legislature of Massachusetts, and his descendants are now the only individuals bearing this name (it is believed) in New-England.

The descendants of his son John removed to Hunterdon County, New-Jersey, in 1717, and some of them remain there, or in the neighboring counties of Mercer and Somerset, to this day. At the close of the Revolution, a portion of this New-Jersey family removed to Mason County, Kentucky, where they met descendants of the family of Matthias Corwin, who had shortly preceded them. Thence they scattered to Ohio, and many other States. This family has furnished several judges, lawyers, and clergymen. (See Index.) The house which they occupied for many years in Salem, (yet standing,) was built by Roger Williams. In it he was tried, and in it, subsequently, some of the witch-trials were held. Samuel Curwen, a descendant of this family, was the well-known loyalist of the American Revolution, whose Journal and Letters have now been for thirty years before the public, and which give us the best account we have of men and habits, in England, during the American Revolution. It has gone through four editions, and is now out of print. [SAMUEL, (2).]

In the Broad Street Cemetery, at Salem, Mass., are found the following inscriptions on three sides of a small monument:

Here lie the remains of George Curwin, Esq., born in England, 1610, died at Salem, 1685; his widow, Elizabeth, only daughter of Governor Edward Winslow, and many of their descendants.

The tomb of Samuel Curwen, born in 1773, when the remains of his ancestors were removed to it, from a vault in the family ground.

Here lie the remains of Richard Ward, Esq., born 1741, d. 1824; his wife, Mehetable, daughter of George Curwin, Esq., and many of their descendants.

Josiah Winslow, son of Governor Winslow, mentions his sister, Elizabeth Corwin, in his will, 1675, (yet preserved,) giving her a pocket-watch, and asks Captain George Corwin to assist his executrix.

* "In the church of Luffwick was a chauntry for two priests, founded in 1498, by the last will of Edward, Earl of Wiltshire, and endowed with the manor of Culworth, and other lands in Bedfordshire. These lands were settled on THOMAS CURWEN and John Ross, the first chaplains, and their successors, by Robert Whittlebury and Thomas Montagn, the earl's feoffes. In 1535, 26 of Henry VIII., the profits arising to each chaplain were rated at 9*l*. 13*s*. 8*d*." This was the Hundred of Luffwick, (or Lowick?) in Northamptonshire. Each county was subdivided into sections called hundreds, comprising a hundred families or free-men. A chauntry (or chantry) was an endowed chapel, where one or more priests daily

In the Winthrop papers, John Curwen is mentioned by Lucie Downinge, in a letter, January 17th, 1661-2, p. 36.

In 1648, she mentions a Mr. Curwins, p. 55.

In 1670, Elizabeth Stone mentions a Mr. and Mrs. Curen, p. 103. (Mass. Hist. Coll., vol. i. Fifth series.)

Mrs. Anne Bradstreet, in 1712, gave, by will, to Mrs. Margaret Corwin, bedding, etc. (N. E. Ant. and Gen. Reg., vol. xiii. 230.)

M. E. Curwen wrote Sketches of the Campaign in Northern Mexico in 1846 and 1847. New-York, 1853. 8vo. Maps.

Maskell E. Curwen wrote a Sketch of the History of Dayton, Ohio.

(See his name printed, by mistake, Marshall, p. 148.)

A few years ago, (1867 or 1868,) appeared the following book notice. This Harry Curwen is apparently an Englishman :

"French Love Songs, and other Poems, selected and translated by HARRY CURWEN, (Carleton,) is a reprint of an excellent series of English translations from several of the most celebrated French poets, including Charles Baudelaire, Alfred de Musset, André Chenier, Victor Hugo, Gautier, Lamartine, Béranger, and others of less prominent note. The volume will have the charm of novelty to most readers in this country, whom it may initiate into a knowledge of a branch of French literature the best portions of which, as here exhibited, are equal in merit to the infamy of the worst specimens."

A certain George Corwin transcribed, in the year 1700, a copy of Compendium Physica, written by Rev. Charles Morton. This manuscript is now in possession of the Massachusetts Historical Society. (See Proceedings of 1868, p. 59.)

George R. Curwen,* Esq., of Salem, has several relics of the family, and portraits of early members, as well as the original voluminous manuscript (only partially published) of Curwen's Journal and Letters.

The following are the portraits :

1. Captain George Curwen, (1;) nearly full-length.
2. His daughter Hannah, (1,) wife of Hon. William Brown, Jr.; half-length.
3. Rev. George† Curwen, (4;) half-length.
4. Hon. Samuel Curwen, (2,) son of Rev. George; half-length.
5. Mrs. Abigail Curwen, wife of Hon. Samuel, (2;) half-length.

sung or said mass for the souls of the donors, or such as they appointed. (Bridges's History of Northamptonshire, England, vol. ii. p. 248.)

The fact that Thomas Curwen was a Roman priest does not necessarily include the fact of celibacy, as "The larger and better portion of the clergy had wives in the reign of Henry the First, and this with the monarch's approval." (Lyttleton's Life of Henry II., vol. iii. p. 42, 328.) Wilkins's Concilia, vol. iii. p. 277, says, "Priests continued to marry, to some extent, as late as the fifteenth century." (Extract from Palfrey's New-England, i. p. 102.)

* He corrected several errors in the Curwen genealogy, as formerly published in the N. E. Ant. and Gen. Reg., vol. ii. p. 50.

† A sermon on the death of Rev. George Curwin may be found in the Boston Public Library. (See in catalogue, Barnard, J. Shelf 17. No. 165.)

6. Mrs. Sarah Curwen, widow of George, (5,) the son of Rev. George, (4;) cabinet size.
7. Richard Ward, Esq., who married Mehetable Curwen, (1;) cabinet size.
8. Mehetable Curwen, (1,) daughter of George, (5,) and wife of Richard Ward; cabinet size.
9. Sarah Curwen, sister of the last; half-length.
10. Samuel Curwen Ward, (5,) son of Richard Ward and Mehetable Curwen, (1;) half-length.
11. The same; cabinet size.
12. Daniel Ward, (1,) son of Richard Ward and Mehetable Curwen, (1;) cabinet size.
13. Richard Ward, (,) son of Richard Ward and Mehetable Curwen, (1;) cabinet size.
14. Mrs. Priscilla Barr Curwen, widow of Samuel Curwen, (6;) half-size.

The silver-headed cane and lace bands of Captain George Curwen, (1,) are also yet in existence, and in possession of George R. Curwen, of Salem, Mass. The ring in which Captain George Curwen, (1,) was painted can not be traced later than July 28th, 1802, when it was in possession of Daniel Ward, son of Mehetable Curwen, (1.) Mr. George R. Curwen, however, has an impression which was made from it. Other smaller relics also exist. Several volumes of Curwen papers, bound, are also in the Worcester Historical Library, some of them dating back to the first George.

SAMUEL CORWINE.

A person of this name is found settled in Essex and Old Norfolk, Massachusetts, in 1652. He may have been of the same English Curwen family as George Curwin, of Salem. He is known to have had a daughter Mary, but probably no sons. See his name and that of his daughter in their respective places. His name is also spelled Curwin.

THOMAS CURWIN.

He and his wife, Alice Curwin, were Quakers, and were in Boston, Massachusetts, in 1676. They were taken out of a church there, and whipped for their faith! In the same year, a William* and Alice Curwin, Quakers, visited Shelter Island, Long Island, and New-York, having come from New-England. The laws were not then so severe against the Quakers as they had been twenty years before, but Thomas Curwin and his wife, Alice, seem to have suffered,† being imprisoned three days, and then whipped and set at liberty. Alice Curwin appears to have written an account of her sufferings. It is not known what became of them. Probably they returned to England.

JOHN CURWEN.

He was of Keswick,* Cumberland, England, and, no doubt, of the ancient Curwen family of that county. But, though an Englishman, he sympathized with the principles of the American revolution; and accordingly, after the war, in 1784, he emigrated to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. His son, John Curwen, bought land, and laid out the town of Curwinsville, Clearfield County, Pa., though the family have no interest there at present.

MALCOLM CORWIN.

He came from London to New-York in 1844, and died in a few years. He left no sons, but two daughters.

CHARLES H. CURWEN.

He is one of the younger sons of Edward Stanley Curwen, the present head of the Curwen family, at Workington, England. He went to Denver, Colorado, about 1868, on business pursuits, and has subsequently removed to New-Orleans, Louisiana.

and abuses of the people called Quakers, in his late Church History of New England, with remarks and observations on several passages in the same, and his confessions to the just judgment of God on them. By John Whiting, London. Printed and sold by T. Sowle, in White Hart Court, in Gracious street, 1702."

The above is bound up in a volume entitled "New-England Judged, not by Man's, but the Spirit of the Lord, and the Sum sealed up of New-England's Persecutions. Being a brief relation of the sufferings of the People called Quakers, in those parts of America, from the beginning of the 5th month, 1656, (the time of their first arrival at Boston, from England,) to the latter end of the 10th month, 1660; Wherein the Cruel Whippings and Scourgings, Bonds and Imprisonments, Beatings and Chainings, starvings and huntings, fines and confiscations of estates, Burning in the hand, cutting off ears, Order of sale for Bondmen and Bondwomen, Banishment upon pain of death, and putting to death of those people, are shortly touched, with a relation of the manner, and some of the other most material proceedings, and a judgment thereon. In answer, To a certain Printed Paper, Intituled a Declaration of the General Court of the Massachusetts, holden at Boston the 18th Octobr, 1658, apologizing for the same. By George Bishop, London. Printed in the year 1661, and now reprinted, 1702 | 3."

On page 101 is the following:

"Cotton Mather might well say, book v. page 95, c. 1, They have seen many instances upon which God might say to them, when I would have healed New-England, then its iniquity was but the more discovered, and did they not accordingly, not long after, (or in the year 1676,) come and forcibly drive Tho. Curwin and Alice, his wife, etc., out of their meeting, at Boston, all along the street, until they came to the prison or house of correction, whereinto they thrust them, which was of service to the truth, for many people, rich and poor, came to look upon them, and some were convinced; it being a time of great tribulation, their hearts failed for fear, and the third day of their imprisonment, they brought them down to the whipping-post; but the presence of the Lord was manifest, and bare them over their cruelty, and they could not but magnify the name of the Lord, and declare of his wondrous works, at which the Heathen were astonished, and shook their heads; and the next day they were set at liberty, and went to their meeting again, which was peaceable; for you saw its like would not do."

A marginal note says, "See Alice Curwin's relation of her labors, travels, and sufferings, p. 5." (Communicated by George R. Curwen, of Salem, Mass.)

* Keswick is described in Hutchinson's Cumberland, vol. ii. p. 153.

THE LANDING OF THE PILGRIMS.

THE breaking waves dashed high
On a stern and rock-bound coast,
And the woods against a stormy sky
Their giant branches tossed ;
And the heavy night hung dark
The hills and waters o'er,
When a band of exiles moored their bark
On the wild New-England shore.

Not as the conquerors come,
They, the true-hearted, came ;
Not with the roll of the stirring drum,
Or the trumpet that sings of fame ;
Not as the flying come,
In silence and in fear—
They shook the depths of the desert's gloom,
With their hymns of lofty cheer.

Amidst the storm they sang,
And the stars heard, and the sea ;
And the sounding aisles of the dim woods rang
To the ANTHEM OF THE FREE.
The ocean eagle soared
From his nest by the white wave's foam,
And the rocking pines of the forest roared—
This was their welcome home.

What sought they thus afar ?
Bright jewels of the mine ?
The wealth of seas, the spoils of war ?
They sought a faith's pure shrine.
Ay, call it holy ground,
The spot where first they trod ;
They have left unstained what there they found—
FREEDOM TO WORSHIP GOD.

The arrangement is in the alphabetical order of the Christian names of all the descendants of the original Corwin immigrants, whatever the surname may be. When the Christian name is printed in SMALL CAPITALS, the surname is Corwin. Other surnames are attached to the Christian name.

The small superior number, (as John⁴), indicates the number of generations from the original immigrant, including also the latter.

The parent's name immediately follows, italicized and in a (parenthesis.)

The simple figures, 1, 2, 3, etc., connect together the descendants of Matthias Corwin, of Long Island.

The figures in parentheses, (1,) (2,) (3,) etc., connect together the descendants of George Curwin, of Salem.

The small letters, (a,) (b,) (c,) connect together the descendants of John Curwen, the immigrant of 1784.

The Roman letters, (I,) etc., refer respectively to Samuel Corwine, and the capitals, (A,) (B,) to Malcolm Corwin, and their descendants, who were very few.

Thomas and William Curwen left no descendants, so far as is known.

The fractional numbers refer to names which were received after the book was ready for the press. See also corrections and additions at the end of the volume.

The definitions of the Christian names are given as far as ascertained, unless they were surnames of other families.

The residences or places of birth are frequently omitted, when a reference to the father's name would be sufficiently definite.

The index gives intermarriages, descendants of other surnames, localities of residence, etc., etc.

By the arrangement of this genealogy, the ancestry or posterity of any person of the family can be at once, and without difficulty, traced to the earliest or latest generation.

He removed to settle in Mason Co., Ky., 1788, though we find him selling land at Hopewell, N. J., in 1792. He bought land of his father in same place in 1780. (Hunterdon Co. Records.) He was related to the celebrated Colonel Joab Houghton, of revolutionary fame. The news of the battle of Lexington was received in Hopewell on the Sabbath, during service. Colonel Houghton, immediately after the benediction, called the male members of the congregation together, and made a stirring appeal to them in behalf of independence, and then and there commenced recruiting a company. A letter of Amos and Sarah Corwine, from Mason Co., Ky., to his brother, John, dated April 20th, 1800, is still preserved.

affected by his unbounded liberality and his public spirit. He was a public speaker of no inconsiderable merit. He took an active part in all public affairs. He was commissioner of the county, and a member of the State Legislature. He was not an aspirant for public honors. Had he been, he would have secured almost any position he might have coveted.

(New-Rochelle, N. Y.)

He was engaged with his brother, Samuel L. Corwine, for several years in the publication of the Yazoo Banner, at Benton, Mississippi, before and after the presidential campaigns of 1840 and 1844. When the Mexican war broke out, he volunteered, in capacity of Lieutenant of Company A, in Colonel Jefferson Davis's First Mississippi Rifles, in which he served the full term of his enlistment, and returned home with his company. They were in action at the battle of Buena Vista, and he was wounded by an escaped ball in the left side. Colonel Davis complimented him, in his report to General Taylor, for having remained on the field in discharge of duty after being wounded.

After his return to the United States, he and his brother Samuel engaged in the publication of The Cincinnati Daily Chronicle. In December, 1849, he was commissioned to Panama, New-Granada, as United States Consul, by President Taylor, and was continued in the same office during the whole of Fillmore's administration. In the spring of 1856, President Pierce commissioned him, as special agent of the United States to Panama, to investigate the riot or massacre which had occurred there in April, resulting in the death of some Americans, and the destruction of their property. His report was the basis of the convention, soon afterward concluded, between the United States and New-Granada, for the adjustment of the claims of American citizens against New-Granada, for damages suffered in the riot. Mr. C. had already been the means of suppressing several riots there, during his consulship. In July, 1856, he was reappointed Consul at Panama, and continued there till the fall of 1861, when he returned home, and was at once offered the command of a regiment at Cincinnati, which was ready to take the field against the rebels, and which desired his services. But owing to important private engagements, mostly of a fiduciary nature, he was obliged to decline the offer.

† Captain Ackerman was born in Portsmouth, New-Hampshire, his ancestors having come from England. (Probably, remotely, from Germany or Holland, as the name is German.—E. T. C.) He followed the sea during the most of his life, commanding vessels plying between New-York and Liverpool. At the commencement of the rebellion he built a steamer, which he chartered to the government, which afterward also purchased her. He amassed a handsome fortune. He died in 1868. His wife's maiden name was Greer. She was a native of Bristol, R. I., and died at New-Rochelle, N. Y., in December, 1865. Her ancestors were from England. Her grandfather, on her maternal side, George Thorpe, was an early Governor at Savannah, Ga.

Governor Marcy, Secretary of State under President Pierce, submitted to Mr. C. the first draught of the treaty between the United States and New-Granada, for suggestions or modifications, and which were incorporated in the treaty. The President offered him, in 1856, a mission to Bogota, to negotiate a new postal convention with that country, but the offer was declined.

Mr. C. is now engaged, in company with his brother, Richard M. Corwine, in the prosecution of claims before the joint commission of the United States and Mexico.

M. Esther, daughter of John Burt, of England.

Ch. George, Richard, William, John, Joseph, Samuel.

He removed to Amwell, Hunterdon Co., N. J., in 1717, probably because of his father's official relation to the Salem trials. His grandson Samuel (4) says, (in a letter yet preserved,) that Bartholomew visited England in 1731, but the fact is very doubtful. The books and papers which he left were destroyed, according to the same authority, in the revolutionary war. The letter above alluded to, in possession of George R. Curwen, of Salem, Mass., and dated (if memory serves) 1751, is sealed with the Curwen arms. Trenton records show that he paid tax on three head of cattle and 100 acres of land in New-Jersey as early as 1721.

Ch. Rev. Clinton, James B.

He grew up on his father's farm in Rhode Island, and though with limited means of education, early became a teacher in the district school there. With these earnings he sought instruction at an academy. At the age of nineteen, he chose the profession of medicine and surgery, and entered the office of Dr. Thomas Hubbard. His father dying soon, gave him a small patrimony, and he attended a course of medical lectures in New-Haven, Ct., and another course at Philadelphia, and graduated at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, in New-York City, in 1818. In 1820, he emigrated to Sardinia, Erie Co., N. Y., where he has since resided, practicing his profession, of which he has ever stood a most honored member. He was elected to the State Legislature in 1841, and held the position of county judge for six years.

Ch. Daniel? Henry? Simeon?

She was a widow in 1719. In 1703, he received a deed from Theophilus, his brother, for land at Aquebogue. This might have been either Theophilus, 1, or his son Theophilus, 2. The latter is no doubt correct, as Matthias, the first settler, mentions only John, Martha, and Theophilus, in his will, which see. (Matthias, 1.) In 1698, Daniel's name stands alone in the census list, intimating that his father was probably dead. (Doc. Hist. i. 454.) In the same list, p. 455, occurs the name of Mary, daughter of Simon Ramsay. Hence Theophilus was not yet married at that date, at least to her. (Southold, L. I.)

- 8 DAVID,⁶ (Jesse, 2,) b. Aug. 5th, 1776, in Fayette Co., Pa. Yet living, 1871.

M. Hannah Roberts.

Ch. Maria, Elias, Elvira, Harvey, John, Cynthia, Minerva, Harvey, Amanda, Thomas.

In 1785, he was taken by his father to Kentucky. In 1798, he removed to Lebanon, Ohio, and became a merchant. Had been a farmer. While engaged as a merchant, his son sat on a keg of powder with a lighted cigar, and a spark caused an explosion, killing the boy, and blowing up the store. He then engaged in speculation in lower Kentucky, for a number of years, and subsequently farmed in different localities in Ohio. He once kept a hotel at Urbana, Ohio. On his ninety-fourth birthday, 1870, a picnic of the Corwins of Warren Co., Ohio, was held in his honor. He has black eyes, dark skin, hair once dark, now snowy white, and is noted for his proverbial kindness of heart.

Ch. Edward ? Separate ?

Edward and Separate are mentioned in will of Daniel, 2, as his grandchildren; hence probably their father was dead at time of Daniel's death in 1747. This Edward, No. 1, may be their father. The dates permit, and the sameness of name favors. Edward was a family name in this branch.

- 2 EDWARD,⁶ (Edward, 1 ?) b. about 1731–2, d. about 1761.

M. Hannah Horton, September 27th, 1753. Both of Mattituck when married.

Ch. Phineas, Elizabeth, Nancy H., Edward, Sarah. (Aquebogue Records.)

They had their children, Phineas and Elizabeth, baptized February 22d, 1756. On July 29th, 1764, the widow, Hannah Corwin, had three children, Hannah, Edward, and Sarah, baptized. In 1765, the widow, Hannah Corwin, joined the church. Now, a Nancy is well known to have been a sister of this Phineas and Edward; and her son Bela says that she wrote her name Nancy H. Hence either the baptismal record is imperfect, or she may have afterwards prefixed the name of Nancy to Hannah, for reasons of her own. Edward was taken from his family in the night by a press-gang, in the time of the French war, (1755,) put on a ship, where he died in about three or four years, without ever getting back to his family. He was grandson of Daniel, 2, though his father's name is not positively ascertained. There is a will of an Edward Corwin, dated May 6th, 1760, in Liber 23, p. 62, in New-York City; but it contains no names except that of Daniel Wells, executor. It was probated February 9th, 1761. It may be the will of Edward, 2, though it is remarkable that no names are mentioned.

- 3 EDWARD,⁷ (Edward, 2,) b. February 13th, 1759, d. September 15th, 1849.

M. (1) Esther, daughter of Yet-once Barstow, of Franklin, Ct., November 4th, 1784. She was born, May 9th, 1766, d. August 20th, 1797. (2) Olive Colgrove, of Rhode Island, March 4th, 1798. She was niece of the wife of his brother Phineas, 1½. She was b. May 1st, 1775, d. December 31st, 1859.

Ch. Bestir, Esther, Ghordis, Olive, Edward, Benjamin, Eliza, Nancy, Diana, Philetus, John.

He removed from Long Island to Connecticut about the opening of the Revolution. His son Ghordis writes, that his father was six years a Revolutionary soldier, enlisting at the age of seventeen; that he was born on Long Island, married in Connecticut; that he removed to Cazenovia, Madison Co., N. Y., about 1804, and to Norwich, McKean Co., Pa., about 1822; was a farmer, and both he and his wife were members of the Baptist Church for more than sixty years.

When he enlisted in the Revolutionary army, his name was recorded as Currin, (according to pronunciation,) and he received his pension from the government, under that name, up till his death in 1849, and his mother, after her husband's death, till her death in 1859. After the close of the Revolution, Edward and his brother Phineas were merchants for a time in New-York, under the name of Currin, but they then corrected it to the proper spelling, of which they were well aware, namely, Corwin. Edward was taken prisoner by the Indians, and they delivered him to the British authorities, and he was not exchanged for about twenty-two months. Hiram Payne, of Waverly, N. Y., undertook to write a sketch of this Edward; but, it is believed, he never completed it.

The name of Edward Corwin, (Curwain, Curwine, Curvin,) late of Ulster Co., N. Y., appears on the Revolutionary Bounty-Book, (copies of which the author consulted in the county clerk's office at Auburn and Syracuse,) as a private of 2d Regiment New-York, Company 6th, (Fowler's Company,) of Revolutionary troops. He received 500 acres of bounty land, being lot 66, in town 10, Cayuga Co., N. Y., on July 8th, 1790. His land was located by Connolly's Survey. (His deed was filed in the county office before recording was practiced; these filed deeds have since been recorded in separate volumes for easy reference, and are known as "The Filed Deeds.") On May 20th, 1792, he assigned to Eliphalet Kellogg, an attorney, of Saratoga, all such bounty lands as the Secretary of War might award. This attorney sold for £25 a plot coming to him, which was in the (then) county of Herkimer, (late Montgomery Co.,) being lot 66, in the town of Pompey, embracing 600 acres. On December 19th, 1793, Edward sold or assigned land to Daniel Delavan, but my memoranda do not give the particulars. Edward's name occurs both in the Revolutionary Bounty-Book and on the Cayuga County records. It is said that a man forged a title to the whole, or a part, of this bounty land, and Edward gave an attorney $50 to prosecute his claim, and when the attorney wanted more money, Edward assigned the land to the attorney, (probably in trust,) upon receiving back his $50. But the land was never recovered, and it was believed that there was a great swindle somewhere. But while such are the orthographies of the name, as taken from the Bounty-Books, the family assert that he received his pension under the orthography of Currin. He was in the battle of Monmouth, at the surrender of Burgoyne, saw André hung, was with Sullivan in his expedition up the Susquehannah, after the massacre of Wyoming. He had many thrilling incidents to relate. He lived to the age of ninety.

3 EDWARD,⁷ (Edward, 3,) b. January 11th, 1805, d. November 23d, 1844. Unmarried. A school teacher.

4 EDWARD BRUSH,⁷ (George, 5,) b. November 10th, 1806, in New-York City, d. April 19th, 1856, in New-York City.

M. Hannah Close Knapp, October 5th, 1847. She was born in Greenwich, Ct., June 4th, 1823. (New-York City.)

He entered the Tradesmen's Bank in 1835, and the Chemical Bank in 1840, as first Book-keeper. Subsequently became first Teller. Resigned September, 1847.

He possessed a splendid library of rare, curious, and valuable books, tracts, autographs, manuscripts, engravings, paintings, etc. It embraced almost every department of literature, but was especially rich in bibliography, poetry, almanacs, penmanship, short-hand, illustrated books, Bibles and biblical literature, old theology and sermons, history and biography; it contained many valuable books and tracts relating to the early history of America, and its literature. Duyckinck, in his Cyclopedia of American Literature, (Vol. i. p. ix.,) refers to this private collection as one which had been freely opened to him, and from which he had received assistance in the preparation of his great work.

He possessed a rare taste, tact, and knowledge in collecting books. Many of the books had neatly penciled memoranda, indicative of extensive reading, while his large acquaintance with bibliography, in which department he possessed many treatises of great value, was employed in the notice of many rare books, but especially of tracts on America. His illustrated books were especially distinguished for the superiority of the engravings. The library was especially rich in versions of the Bible, the gem of the collection being Tyndale's Pentateuch, the only other perfect copy known to exist belonging to Lord Granville. This book was "em-printed at Marlborow, in the land of Hesse, by me Hans Luft, in the year of our Lord, 1530." It was 18mo in size, and in Black Letter, with numerous curious wood-cuts. It was bound in antique morocco, by Hayday, with fac-similes by Harris. This volume brought at the sale $500.

The library also contained copies of John Eliot's Indian Bible, and Psalms, and Testament, printed at Cambridge, Mass., in 1661-63, 2 vols. 4to, cal. They belonged to the first edition. The type was set up by an Indian. This was also the first edition of the Bible printed in America. The Psalms are in Indian verse. It is in the Natick, or Nipmuck language. These books brought $200 at the sale.

The collection contained 457 books on Miscellaneous Literature, 455 on Bibliography, 57 classified as Polygraphic Authors, 76 volumes of Addresses, Orations, or Discourses, 45 Novels and Romances, 532 volumes of Poetry and the Drama, 81 on Natural and Philosophical Sciences, 193 on Mathematics, Astronomy, Engineering, Military Works, etc., 209 on Calligraphy and Stenography, 96 on Games and Sports, 91 volumes on the Arts 248 Illustrated Books, Scrap-Books, Engravings, etc., 100 Bibles, Prayer-Books, Psalters, etc., 133 volumes on Biblical Literature, 417 on Theology, 21 on Jurisprudence, 74 on General History, 472 works relating to America, (of this number, not a few were pamphlets tied in lots, and counted as lots,) 164 on Biography and Correspondence, 35 on Voyages and Travels, besides many autographs, manuscripts, etc. To these must be added 1292 engravings. It was a most splendid collection of books, and the catalogue itself is a curiosity.

Ch. James Horton, Leah Margaret, Edward Tanjore, George Brainard.

He removed to New-York City with his father in 1824; became ferry-master at the Canal street (Hoboken) ferry in 1826, which position he retained for twelve years; then became a contractor, especially of wharves and bridges, building some of the largest docks, and most of the ferries about New-York City, prior to 1850. He also engaged in the steamboat business, being one third owner of the steamboat Napoleon, plying between New-York and Albany, in 1839, and several years thereafter. In the spring of 1847, he removed to Jersey City, having contracted to build the Cunard Docks, in that place, for the British steamers.

* His mother's sister married a Callwell.

† Christian Shuart was a descendant of Olferts Suert, who is found living on Broadway, (New-York City,) below Trinity Church, in the year 1687. In 1698, his name again occurs in Valentine's Manual of New-York City, as a freeman of the city. The records of the Dutch Church give the baptisms of the following children: Ytje, (Grietje,) baptized July 3d, 1698; Johannes, April 6th, 1701; Luykas, May 24th, 1704; Cornelis, December 25th, 1705, who died soon after; and another Cornelius, August 17th, 1707. One or more of these sons moved to Bergen Co., N. J., with the early settlers of that county, about 1725-30. In the baptismal records of the Reformed Church of Paramus, in that county, we find the names of Joost Schoourt and Elizabeth, his wife, having a son Lewis baptized in 1754; of Adolph Scoort, and Margrietje, his wife; of Hannes Spourt, and Elizabeth, his wife; and of William Spourt, and Catrina, his wife; the latter couple had the following children baptized at Paramus, namely, Grietje, 1753; Isaac, 1756, whose wife was Grietje, and who had sons, William, 1781, and John, 1786; William, 1758; Adolph, 1764, whose wife was Altje Bush, and who left the following children: William; Margaret, born March 3d, 1792; David, July 1st, 1794; Catrina, September 19th, 1796; Jacobus, (James,) October 17th, 1798; Daniel, February 1st, 1801; Margrietje, July, 1803; Christian, December 23d, 1806; Abram, December 23d, 1806; Elizabeth, October 15th, 1808; John, 1810, and Henry, 1812; the last son of William and Catrina was Christian, born July, 1771. When William died, his wife Catrina married a Mr. Zabriskie, at Paramus, and lived on the place subsequently owned by Abram Carlock, in what is called the Point Neighborhood. Christian Shurte first married Margaret Demarest, who died April, 1808, aged 37 years and 3 months. Their children were William, b. 1796;

Christian Shuart was drowned in the Passaic River, at Paterson, N. J., March 22d, 1824. His wife Leah Kipp, (daughter of Nicholas Kipp and Leah Mandeville,) was born February 5th, 1777, and d. November 21st, 1851. She was mar. a third time, to Jasper Dodd, on ———. (See Note on Rev. Edward T., 7)

* TANJORE is the name of a large city in Southern Hindostan. The name was used by the celebrated authoress, Catharine G. Ward, as a given name to one of her characters in her work entitled The Mysterious Marriage, or, The Will of my Father. The first American edition was published in New-York in 1834, from the sixteenth London edition. The termination jore, or yure, means village. The meaning of Tan is unknown.

† Nicholas Kipp was a descendant of Roeloff de Kype, of Bretagne, France. Roeloff was born about 1510-20, and was a warm partisan of the Guises. He fled to Holland. Here he joined the party of the Earl of Anjou, and fell in battle near Jarnac. His son, Roeloff de Kype, lived at Amsterdam, Holland. In 1588, a company was formed for the purpose of exploring a north-east passage to the Indies, around the northern coasts of Europe and Asia. Hendrik Kype, born 1576, the son of Roeloff, was among the members. He left Amsterdam with his family, and came to New-Netherlands in 1635. In 1642, he received a tract of land on the north side of Bridge Street, in New-York City. He soon after returned to Holland, and died there. He left three sons in America, Henry, James, and Isaac, all of whom were born in Holland. Isaac married, in 1653, Catalina Hendricks de Suyens, and in 1675, Mrs. Maria Vermilyea de la Montaigne. Isaac's children were Henry, b. 1654; Tryntje, b. 1656; Abraham, b. 1659; Isaac, b. 1662; and James, b. 1663. Henry and James were the co-patentees of the manor of Kipsburgh, on the Hudson. From James, Bishop Kip, of California, and Rev. Francis M. Kip, for many years pastor at Fishkill, are descended. Isaac owned a part of what is now the City Hall Park, and Nassau Street was first called, after him, Kip Street.

James, another son of the first Hendrik, was born in 1631. He married Maria de la Montaigne in 1654. His children were John, b. 1655; James, b. 1656; Abraham, b. 1658; Jesse, b. 1660; Rebecca, b. 1664; Rachel, b. 1664; Maria, b. 1666; Hendrik, b. 1669; Catharine, b. 1671; Petrus, b. 1674; Benjamin, b. 1678; Samuel, b. 1682; Solomon, b. 1682.

Henry, the eldest son of the original Hendrik, was born about 1628. He married Anna de Sille, (daughter of Nicasius de Sille and Maria de la Montaigne,) on February 29th, 1660. He probably removed to Pollidy, near Hackensack, N. J. His son Nicasie, (Nicholas,) named after his maternal grandfather, married Antje Bryant, and reared a large family in New-Jersey, whose descendants are now very numerous. Nicasie's children were Henry; Isaac, b. 1697, who married Williamytje Berdan in 1723; James, who moved to Schraalenbergh; Peter, b. 1703, who married Elsie Vanderbeck; Jacob, b. 1702; Catharine; perhaps at Geneva, N. Y., July 25th, 1861. She was b. at Geneva, August 21st, 1840.

Ch. Euphemia Kipp, (a son, unnamed, b. June 25th, d. June 26th, 1866,) and Charles Edward.

He was graduated from the College of the City of New-York, in the first class which that institution sent forth, in 1853, having entered at its opening in January, 1849. In the fall of 1853, he entered the Theological Seminary of the Reformed (Dutch) Church at New-Brunswick, N. J., and was graduated thence in 1856. The following year was spent in New-Brunswick as a resident licentiate. In July, 1857, received a call to the Reformed Church of Paramus, N. J., and was installed September 22d of same year. Farewell sermon was preached November 29th, 1863, having accepted a call to the Reformed Church of Millstone, N. J., in which he was installed December 29th, 1863. In 1859, published The Manual and Record of the Church of Paramus; in the same year, The Manual of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church in North-America, giving the names and settlements, with dates, of all the ministers of that denomination, with succinct accounts of its educational and benevolent operations; in 1866, published The Millstone Centennial; and in 1869, The Manual of the Reformed Church in America, being a revised and enlarged edition of the former Manual, with about one hundred sketches or characterizations of deceased ministers; with an introductory chapter on the history of the denomination, and appendices, containing the history of Rutgers College, of the New-Brunswick Theological Seminary, and of the several Benevolent Boards of the church.

(1) GEORGE CORWIN OR CURWIN, (Captain,) b. in England, December 10th, 1610. Came from Northampton, Eng., and settled at Salem, Mass., in 1638; d. January 3d, 1685.

M. (1) Elizabeth, daughter of John Herbert, Mayor of Northampton, and had five children. M. (2) Elizabeth,* widow of John White. She d. September 15th, 1668. M. (3) Elizabeth Brook, widow of Robert Brook, and daughter of Governor Edward Winslow,† of Plymouth Colony, on September 22d, 1669. She d. after 1694.

Ch. Abigail, John, Jonathan, Hannah, Elizabeth; by third wife, Penelope, Susannah, George.

He settled at Salem in company with the celebrated Hugh Peter, and laid the foundation of the commercial enterprise of that place. He first began the building of vessels in that port, and was afterward extensively engaged in commerce during the whole of his long life. His books of account and his mercantile correspondence with Sir William Peake (Lord Mayor of London in 1666) show that he had embarked in the London trade previous to 1658. The late Rev. Dr. Bentley thus notices him in his Sketch of Salem, published in the collections of the Massachusetts Historical Society, in 1800: "This year, (1685,) Salem lost another eminent man, Captain George Curwin, who came here in 1638 with his family, and was rich. He was often engaged in town affairs, and commanded a troop of horse. He was also a representative in the General Court. There is a three-quarter portrait‡ of him in the hands of Samuel Curwen, Esq., son of the Rev. George Curwin, and his great-grandson. He had a fine, round forehead, large nostrils, high cheek bones, and gray eyes. His dress, a wrought flowing neckcloth, a sash covered with lace, a coat with short cuffs, and reaching half-way between the wrist and elbow, the shirt in plaits below; an octagon ring and cane, which still remain." He left no debts, and one of the largest estates that had been administered in the colony, amounting to £5964 19s. 7d. Besides the homestead, he left four dwelling-houses, four warehouses, and two wharves in Salem; three farms in the vicinity, containing fifteen hundred acres; a warehouse and wharf in Boston; four ketches, valued at £1050; merchandise valued at £2232; coin £93 7s., and 621 ounces of silver plate. Among the wearing apparel inventoried are a silver-laced cloth coat, a velvet ditto, a satin waistcoat embroidered with gold, a troping scarf and silver hat-band, golden-topped and embroidered gloves, and a silver-headed cane, which still remains.

* She was the mother of two children by Mr. White; Elizabeth, married Samuel Andrew, and Mary, married Samuel Gardner.

In the settlement of the estate his widow claimed some plate given her by the lord mayor, by her father, and by the governor; together with eight pounds in gold, which her husband had received from Mr. Pope, being the "produce" of an Indian boy sent her by the governor and council from Plymouth.

In 1657, George Corwin and many others petitioned the government for a plantation of ten miles square between Springfield and Fort Awrania, (Orange, now Albany;) the petition was granted, if the plantation were begun within eighteen months. (Mass. Bay Col. Recs. iv. 374.)

In 1659, the court judged that a present claim of our just rights upon Hudson River, in the Fort of Awrania, by a letter from this court to the Dutch Governor, etc., etc.

Ch. Bartholomew.

He is mentioned in Hutchinson's History of Massachusetts as a captain in the expedition against Canada under Sir William Phipps, in 1690. He was the unfortunate sheriff of Essex Co., Mass., May 7th, 1692, and for officiating in the witchcraft delusion was severely persecuted by the friends of the sufferers till his death, before which, however, he removed to Winthrop's Neck, Ct. His only son, on reaching maturity, removed to Amwell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

That one so young as George (only 27) should have been appointed sheriff, may be explained by the circumstances that his uncle, Jonathan Corwin, his maternal uncle, Wait Winthrop, and his father-in-law, were among the judges of the Court of Oyer and Terminer.

In this relation he continued till death. His portrait is in possession of George R. Curwen, of Salem. He died of a sudden cold. He left a reputation in the church of great philanthropy, good address, and excellent pulpit talents. A Boston paper of the day says, "He was highly esteemed in his life, and very deservedly lamented at his death, having been very eminent for his early improvements in learning and piety, his singular abilities and great labors, his remarkable zeal and faithfulness in the service of his Master. He was a great benefactor to our poor."

He came to Ohio for the purpose of constructing a mill, about 1798, being engaged in learning the business, and became acquainted with Miss Wilson. He returned to Kentucky, and upon visiting her at one time, he used a willow switch for a riding-whip. It was planted by them in the father's yard, and grew to be a large tree, and was looked upon by them in after years as typical of their own lives. A few years prior to their death, the willow showed signs of decay, and the old people looked upon it with feelings that can not be expressed. And it is rather a strange coincidence that, when one side was lifeless, Mrs. Corwine had passed from this "tree life" to immortality; and about the time Mr. Corwine yielded to the grasp of the hand of death, the dead willow was prostrated by the storm.

They were frugal, industrious, and benevolent. In early life they were both members of the Baptist Church. She remained so until her death. But Mr. Corwine, at middle life, became a Universalist. By his generosity and benevolence he won the esteem of all. He was active in business, and amassed a very considerable fortune. He was one of the first associate judges of the Common Pleas Court of Pike County, A.D. 1815, which office he held for several terms. He took a lively interest in the political affairs of the country, and in the welfare of the Indians, and in disposing of his estate devised a considerable sum to aid in educating the "North-American Indians." The bequest was received by a New-York society to be applied as directed. The residue of his property was distributed to his relatives.

DISTINGUISHED WEDDING.

“Under the above caption, the Washington Herald (of Tazewell Co., Ill.) gives the particulars of the marriage of Mrs. Helen Corwin Fisher (well known to the writers of the NEW-YORK WEEKLY as a powerful and fascinating romance writer) and General Pierce, of Pine Bluff, Ark. This is what the Herald says:

“On Tuesday evening last, February 7th, the Christian Church was crowded with the beauty and élite of our town, to witness the marriage of General H. A. Pierce, of Pine Bluff, Ark., and Mrs. Helen Corwin Fisher, of this city.

“The hour set for the ceremony was eight o'clock, and expectation was on tiptoe, for General Pierce was a stranger to our people, and we wanted to know who the fortunate Southerner was, who had come to take away one of our brightest ornaments.

“Mrs. Fisher's name has become familiar throughout our whole land as an authoress of rare ability, and her charming productions have done much to render the NEW-YORK WEEKLY so highly prized. She has been familiar here among us since her girlhood, and we feel more than an ordinary interest in her, for in a measure her honor and praise are reflected upon her many friends here.

“The parties appeared shortly after the time indicated, and proceeded to the altar without waiting-men and maids. The ceremony was short, simple, and unostentatious, and at its close the parties retired from the church to the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. D. C. Corwin, where they received those who wished to pay their respects personally.

“General Pierce, we learn, is a lawyer of ability, an eloquent speaker and writer, and the editor of a very prosperous paper, called the Jefferson Republican, published at Pine Bluff, Ark.

“The happy pair will leave in a day or two for their sunny home, and the best wishes of all go with them. We congratulate Arkansas upon this acquisition.”

“And this is what we say: We have known Mrs. Helen Corwin Pierce (née Fisher) for some eight or ten years, during which time she has written for us constantly, and we have always found her not only an accomplished writer, but a most estimable lady. General Pierce, her husband, we have never seen but once, and then for a few moments only; but if there is any thing in physiognomy, he is just the man to make a true woman happy. Sincerely do we congratulate the newly-married pair, and wish them all the happiness that can attend the union of

“Two minds with but a single thought—
Two hearts that beat as one.”

This is, no doubt, the Jacob who signed the agreement to support Congress in 1775. He was pastor of the strict Congregational Church at Riverhead, Long Island, November, 1787–1800. This church had been organized in 1785, with a few members, by Rev. Daniel Youngs, with the style of "The Second Strict Congregational Church of Riverhead." Rev. David Wells, nephew of Jacob Corwin, became pastor of this church in 1809. He died in 1821, aged 46. It had no settled pastor after this. It belonged to The Separated Churches of New-England. Those on Long Island formed a convention with the kindred churches of Connecticut, called "The Strict Congregational Convention of Connecticut," and in 1781 published a Confession of Faith and Form of Government, which were re-published on Long Island in 1823. This also contains a brief history of their separation. In 1791, "The Strict Congregational Convention of Long Island" was established. The original members were Revs. Daniel Youngs, Jacob Corwin, and Noah Hallock, all of whom had been ordained by the Connecticut Convention. As early as 1793, however, ministerial exchanges began to take place with the other body. On April 2d, 1815, Jacob Corwin organized the Third Congregational church at Brookhaven, Long Island, and supplied it for several years. He also prepared a genealogy of the Corwin family, but his papers were destroyed.

Ch. William, George, Martin Luther, James, Mehetable, Benjamin, Elizabeth, John, Moses.

The record gives the following parcels of land as belonging, in 1776, to "James Corwin, son of John, of Mattituck :"

(1) "12½ acres of land, bought in 1763, lying on the south side of the King's road, bounded easterly by the land of Storrs Hubbard, and northerly by the road, being about 27 poles on the highway; westerly and southerly by land of Timothy Corwin, which land was purchased of Timothy Corwin, (No. 1,) for £122."

(2) "¼ acre of land at Mattituck, purchased of John Corwin in 1763, probably his brother."

(3) "A parcel, purchased of Harmony Pike, at Mattituck, containing 6½ acres, 1766. These deeds were all recorded April 29th, 1776."

He lost his father when only fourteen years of age, and when in the prime of life was obliged to leave his native place (Mattituck) because of the Revolutionary war, having signed the association to support Congress. He settled, finally, near Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y. Owing to his early orphanage and subsequent removal to a then distant and new country, his descendants lost the name of James's father, (John, 3,) for many years. The writer, a great-grandson, was unable to discover this name, by most diligent inquiry, among any of the descendants. In 1863, however, he visited Mattituck and adjoining places, and in the town and county records, in the grave-yards, and by tradition, the connecting link with the earlier generations was soon indisputably established. The father's tombstone (John's) is yet standing at Mattituck, (see John, 3.) James is said to have been buried at Warwick, Orange Co., N. Y. Another tradition assigns his burial place at Millo, between Middletown and Goshen.

M. Deborah Calista, daughter of Thomas Orton, of Hamilton, N. Y., on January 6th, 1824.

Ch. Charlton J., Eugene P., Orton, Helen M., Charles L., Thomas D.

He was for several years a pupil of Dr. Nott, pastor of the Presbyterian church in his native place. He removed with his family to Cazenovia, N. Y., and united with the Baptists, at Woodstock, when at the age of twenty-five. He studied at Hamilton Literary and Theological Institution, graduating in 1822. He first preached a few months at Coventry, in Chenango Co., N. Y., and then settled successively at the following places: Deposit, Delaware Co., N. Y., 1823-6; Penfield, Monroe Co., N. Y., 1826-31; Webster, Monroe Co., N. Y., 1831-3; Binghamton, Broome Co., N. Y., 1833-5; Great Bend, Susquehanna Co., Pa., 1835-7; Earlville, Madison Co., N. Y., 1837-9; Bridgewater, Oneida Co., N. Y., 1840-1; Augusta, Oneida Co., N. Y., 1841-2; Clinton, Oneida Co., N. Y., 1839-43; Webster, Monroe Co., N. Y., 1843-5; supplied destitute churches, 1845-8; Belleville, St. Clair Co., Ill., 1848-9; Bloomington, McLean Co., Ill., 1849; Washington, Tazewell Co., Ill., 1850-4. The last three appointments in Illinois were from the American Baptist Home Missionary Society. He subsequently became an agent of the American Bible Union, traveling in Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, and Kentucky. His widow afterward lived in Brooklyn, N. Y., and in Washington, D. C., and now at Fort Smith, Arkansas.

- $\frac{1}{2}$ JEDEDIAH,⁴ (Samuel, 1,) b. about 1700.

Ch. John?

1 JEDEDIAH,⁴ (Theophilus, 2?) This name is given, as there is evidently some confusion between the names of Jedediah, 1, and Daniel, 2. The next Jedediah (namely, No. 2) is called, in the letters of administration, given his administrators, in 1799, the son of Jedediah. Yet he and all his brothers and sisters are elsewhere called children of Daniel. Hence I have supposed that Daniel, 2, had also the second name of Jedediah, though I have no proof. (See Daniel, 2.)

Ch. Israel, Jesse, Amy.

(Long Island and Connecticut.)

David Corwin, (No. 8,) of Lebanon, Ohio, has a tradition that this Jesse emigrated from Wales about 1718, coming to Long Island, and that Jesse's grandfather came from Hungary, and was a son of Matthias II., who reigned in Hungary about ten years. This Matthias II. was Archduke of Austria, 1608–18, but history declares he died childless. He granted religious toleration throughout Austria. It does not appear, as far as the writer is aware, that he possessed the Corwin name at all. He was apparently no relation to Matthias Corwin, I., 1458–90. The tradition seems therefore inaccurate. (But see Introductory Chapter.) Isaac B. Corwin (No. 11) also informed the writer that he had received a tradition from his ancestors that the family came from Wales. But this Isaac (whose grandfather was an own cousin of the writer's grandfather) is a direct descendant, beyond dispute, of Matthias, No. 1, who came to America in 1633, and the writer has not met with a line as to a Welsh extraction of this Matthias. Isaac Corwin's grandfather, (Isaac,) and the Jesse under consideration, both settled in Flanders, Morris Co., N. J., about 1760-70. (At about the same time, settled in the same county, William, 2, Benjamin, 2, and James, 9.) This Welsh tradition, therefore, being found only in Morris County branches, had probably a common origin. Now, there is a town called Corwen in the north-eastern part of Wales, and noticing this on the map, probably gave rise to the tradition. The writer has learned from Rev. Mr. Richardson, the clergyman of that place, with whom he has corresponded, that none of the Corwin name live there, and that the etymology of the word is very different from the surnames Corwin, in America. (See Letter in the Introduction.) Traditions are very uncertain things, unless they can be substantiated by documentary evidence. There was little emigration to this country in the early part of the last century. The probable ancestor of the above Jesse, the writer has put down as Matthias, 2, whose descendants were lost track of. If Baptists at that early day, as many of Jesse's descendants have been since, it will explain the apparent absence of names on the baptismal records. Jesse possibly had the middle name of William. (See William, 1.)

2 CAPTAIN JOHN,³ (John, 1,) b. —, 1663, d. December 13th, 1729.

M. Sarah —, before 1698, when her name occurs on census list, as wife of John. (Doc. Hist. N. Y. i. 450.)

* Once his name is spelled Curwinne. Southold Records, B, p. 41.

Ch. Benjamin, John, David, Sarah, Elizabeth, Hester.

In 1692, received of his father a lot of woodland lying west of the town, (Southold,) and on the north side of the road, by Nathaniel Terry's land. (Book C, 124.) Same year, received a second lot of land at Aquebock. 1695, another lot of upland, west of the town, and bounded west by Benjamin Moore's land, and east by Mr. Hubbard's land. 1696, deed from John and Jemima Paine for 50 acres; in 1702, the same number of acres was deeded back to Paine. 1702, deed from Jonathan Horton for land between Duck Pond and Inlet; same year, sold 25 acres of fresh meadows to Caleb Horton. 1704, deed from W. Downs for land on Peconic River. 1705, bought land of Jonathan Horton. (Book C, 248.) 1708, Theophilus Curwin sells land to John Curwin for five shillings, namely, $\frac{1}{3}$ part of a meadow at Aquebogue, on west side of Vail's Brook. (Samuel Curwin, a witness.) 1708, buys the homestead and 18 acres at Southold, of his brother Matthias, for £76, who also sold him a certain lot of land in Indian Neck for 50 shillings. 1711, deed from John Youngs, 2 lots in Queen's Road. 1712, deed to Benjamin Youngs, 50 acres.

In 1712, the following exhibit of John Corwin's land is found in Southold town records.

His right of commonage is a third lot.

(1.) House lot, 4 acres, bounded west by Jonathan Horton's land and east by Sarah Young's.

(2.) 18 acres of land, west by the lane that goes to Jonathan Horton's land, bounded east by Thomas Moore's.

(3.) 22 acres lying west of Jonathan Horton's, a north sea lot. Bought of John Budd and Sam. Youngs.

(4.) 21 acres on north side; east is John Peken's, west, John Hubbard's.

(5.) A third lot of meadow at Tom's Creek, John Budd's land on the south and Benjamin Young's (?) meadow north.

(6.) A parcel of meadow at Tom's Creek Head, by the beach.

(7.) A second lot of meadow in Pine Neck, Mrs. Elton's land west, and Mr. Hubbard's north.

(8.) 1 acre of meadow on south side of Goose Neck.

(9.) His land on south side of Hog Neck, a third lot of 9 acres.

(10.) A second lot of land at Mattituck, butting on the highway.

(11.) His meadow on south side of river is 4 shares.

(12.) A second lot of meadow at Deep Creek, Aquebogue, Jeremiah Vail's land on the north.

Ch. John, James, William, Elizabeth, Sarah. Several children of a John Corwin, who died young, perhaps belonged to this John, namely, a child died 1735, another died 1738, his second daughter died 1746, and Elnathan died January, 1738.

A widow, Elizabeth Corwin, joined the church of Aquebogue, August 26th, 1764. Possibly John's widow. The family lived about a mile and a half east of Mattituck, in the town of Southold. The following is his will :

In ye name of God, Amen. I, John Corwin, of Southold, in ye County of Suffolk and province of New-York, being weak in body but of perfect & sound mind and memory, blessed be God, and calling to mind ye uncertainty of this life, do make this my last will & testament in manner following. First, I recommend my soul to Almighty God that gave it, hoping through ye pations of my Savior to have full pardon & remission of all my sins; and my body to ye earth to be buried according to ye descretion of my execurs hereafter named; & as touching of the disposition of all my worldly goods & estate, I dispose of in the following manner & form. First: I give & bequeath unto my beloved wife, Elizabeth Corwin, one third part of all my lands, to improve, so long as she shall remain my widow, & no longer; and one third part of all my living stock, excepting one yoke of oxen, and one third part of all my household goods, to dispose of as she shall think fit. Item: I give, devise, & bequeath unto my son, John Corwin, my lot of land whereon I now dwell, to his heirs and assigns; likewise one half lot of land which I purchased of my brother, David Corwin, unto his heirs & assigns; condition: my sd son John shall pay unto my son William Corwin, the sum of one hundred & fifty pounds, York currency, when my son William should arrive to twenty one years of age, & fifty pounds to my two daughters, to be equally divided between them, my sd two daughters; provided, nevertheless, that in case my sd son William should happen to die, I will that one hundred pounds should be paid to my son James Corwin, & ye other fifty pounds to my two daughters, Elizabeth & Sarah Corwin, or to either of them that shall be then living, (if in case that either of them should happen to die;) but if so be that my son John Corwin should refuse to pay the above payments as above-mentioned, I order & direct that my sd half lot of land purchased of my sd brother David Corwin, be sold, & the money disposed of as abovesaid. Item: I give & bequeath unto my son James Corwin, two hundred pounds out of my personal estate, to be paid him by my executor, hereafter named, immediately after my decease. Item: I give & bequeath unto my son John Corwin one yoke of oxen, one mare, and one third part of all my farming utensils. Item: I give unto my two sons, James & William Corwin, ye other two thirds of all my farming utensils. Item: I give & bequeath unto my two daughters, Elizabeth & Sarah Corwin, all the rest, residue, & remainder of my moveable personal estate, to be divided equally between them, share & share alike. Lastly, I ordain & appoint my beloved wife, Elizabeth Corwin, & my son, John Corwin, Executricks & Executor of this my last will & testament, to see the same performed according to my intent & meaning. In witness whereof I, the said John Corwin, have to this my last will & testament set my hand & seal this eighteenth day of December, in the year of our Lord Christ seventeen hundred and fifty-four.

Ch. Sarah, Elizabeth, John, Johanna, Lydia, Abigail, Bethia, Deney, Parnel, Parnel, George W.

He was known as the Major, of Mattituck, in the Revolution. The patriotism of his wife, in compelling a British officer to refrain from turning his horses into her husband's wheat-field, upon the threat of instantly shooting the first horse that entered, is narrated in Griffin's Journal, p. 185. They both united with the church of Aquebogue, August 1st, 1790. In 1775, a John Corwin, (probably this one,) is found in Captain Lupton's Company, and signed engagement to support Congress. May, 1776, appointed First Lieutenant in Captain Paul Reeves's Company of minute men.

(In 1776, one John died, and a John is on census list, 363, having in family 2 males, 2 females over 16, 3 children, and 1 slave.)

Ch. Elias, Nathan, John B., William, Eliza, Sarah.

In 1803, bought 111 acres of his father, in Roxbury, Morris Co., for $550. He subsequently removed to Ithaca, N. Y., where his will is found. In his will he directs that certain sums of money shall be paid to Theodore Corwin, and to George Corwin, to school them. The will seems to indicate that Elias, his son, had four children, George, Theodore, Deborah Sterns, ? and Hannah Condict? It refers to a grandson, John C., son of William S., and a daughter of the same, Elizabeth. Also to a grandson, Joseph. A Joseph Corwin was executor. The items of this will are thus recorded, as the writer could not harmonize them with other material.

* Curwin.

† John Winthrop's mother was daughter of Col. Read, of the English army. After Col. Read's death, his widow married Hugh Peters. She had no children by her second husband, but three by her first. One of these, Elizabeth, became the wife of John Winthrop Jr., and their daughter, Margaret, became the wife of John Curwin, as above. Mr. Read was attracted to England by the conflicts between Charles I. and his parliament, taking part in the great civil wars, in which he was colonel of a regiment. Fitz-John Winthrop, another of John Curwin's maternal uncles, was a captain in Read's Regiment.

Ch. Jonathan, Asa, Rachel, Selah, Jason, Hannah, John? Isaac, Richard, Elizabeth.

His will is at Riverhead, (Lib. A, p. 528.) In 1776, a Jonathan is on census list, 306, having in family, 1 male over 50, 2 males and 2 females over 16. A Jonathan Corwin married Experience Howell, December 23d, 1784. Possibly a second wife of this one. (Aquebogue Recs.)

1½ JONATHAN,⁵ (John, 4?) b. —, d. —, 1793?

M.? Elizabeth Corwin, May 26th, 1774.

An infant daughter died September 11th, 1775.

(These names are Jonathan Corwin, Jr., married Elizabeth Corwin. But the Jr. does not always imply in these records that the father's name was the same.) (Aquebogue Recs.)

2 JONATHAN,⁶? (Jonathan, 1,) bapt. at Mattituck, January 28th, 1754, d. January 4th, 1785.

* Curwen.

M. Hannah Reese, who afterward married John Howell, on June 19th, 1794. (Aquebogue Rees.)

Ch. Jason, Hannab, Rebecca.

In 1775, a Jonathan Corwin was in Captain Wallack's Company, and signed engagements to support Congress. In 1776, on census list, 100, having in family, 1 male, 2 females over 16, and no young children. In 1776-77, there was a Jonathan at Norwich, Ct., who had served in two campaigns. Probably Jonathan, 2. A widow, Hannah Corwin, was baptized at Aquebogue, October 30th, 1785, with her three children, Hannah, Jason, and Rebecca. The writer has also a memorandum that a Jonathan Corwin married an Abigail Howell in 1748, but he has been unable to locate him.

3 JONATHAN,⁷ (Asa, 2,) bapt. at Aquebogue, May 14th, 1786.

The Ontario Co., N. Y., records show a Jonathan Corwin and Mary his wife, of the town of Lyon, selling land in 1816 to Griffin Hazard. William R. Corwin a witness. Possibly this was Jonathan, 3.

4 Jonathan Brown,⁷ (Mary Corwin, 8,) b. —, 1800?

5 Jonathan Meyers,⁸ (Armina Brown, 2,) b. —.

(1) JONATHAN,² [George, (1),] b. at Salem, Mass., November 14th, 1640 d. July 9th, 1718.

M. Elizabeth Gibbs, of Boston, March 20th, 1675-6, widow of Robert Gibbs, (who was son of Sir Henry Gibbs,) and daughter of Jacob and Margaret (Webb) Sheaf, of Boston. She d. August 19th, 1718.

Ch. Elizabeth, Margaret, Sarah, Jonathan, George, John, Margaret, Anna, Jonathan, Harbert.

He was conspicuous for energy and influence, holding high judicial and political positions, and being all his life clothed with public trusts. In the Massachusetts civil list we find that Jonathan Corwin was a member of the Provincial Council of Massachusetts (having also been named such in the new charter) from 1692-1714. (He had been deputy to the General Court in 1682 and 1689.) The following extract from the Salem records shows much confidence in him, and, at the same time, the action of that town toward reëstablishing a government under the venerable Bradstreet, in opposition to the tyranny of Sir Edmund Andros:

"May 7th, 1689. Captain John Prince and Mr. Jonathan Corwin were chosen to assist in the Council at Boston, to be held on the 9th inst., and we desire that the honorable the governor, the magistrates, and deputies chosen in 1686, would (having always due respect to our dependence on the Crown of England, and the obligations we are under by the late declaration before the surrender of the last government) reassume our charter government, by taking their places and forming a General Court as soon as possible; unto which we shall readily and cheerfully subject ourselves, and be always assisting to the utmost of our power, with our lives and estates, as formerly."

In 1701, he was negatived, but accepted by the governor. He was one of the judges of the Special Court of Oyer and Terminer, having taken the place of Richard Saltonstall, who resigned at the trial of the supposed witchcraft cases. This appointment was made June 13th, 1692, "to hear and determine all manner of crimes and offenses perpetrated within the counties of Suffolk, Essex, and Middlesex, Mass." He was judge of the Superior Court of Common Pleas of Essex from 1692-1708. He was Judge of Probate from June 3d, 1698-1702. He was appointed one of the Commissioners of Excise and Impost, June 24th, 1692. On November 23d, 1703, he was appointed, with others, for the trial of an Indian, at Salem, Mass. On February 20th, 1707-8, he was appointed justice in the Superior Court of Judicature, (caused by the resignation of Judge John Leverett, who was elected to the Presidency of Harvard College,) in connection with Winthrop, Sewall, Walley, and Hathorne. These appointments were made by the Governor and Council. He is referred to as Jona., in N. E. Hist. Reg. iv. 128.

He resided, after 1674-5, in the house which is still standing on the south-west corner of Essex and North streets, Salem, which he purchased of the administrators of the estate of Captain Richard Davenport, of Boston, and which the research of William P. Upham, Esq., shows to have been the identical house originally owned and occupied by Roger Williams, in the rooms of which the whole power of the Colony was employed to suppress this champion of religious liberty, before the persecutions to which he was subjected drove him to Rhode Island.

Ch. Henry, Theophilus ; (2,) Thomas, Matthias, Martha, Samuel, Benjamin ?

Henry Case perhaps lived in Rhode Island, whence his widow probably came with her two children, after his death, (1661-5.) In 1660, a Henry Case had a suit with Theophilus Corwin. In 1681, Martha Hutchinson and her eldest son, Henry Case, give each other releases in respect to her first husband's estate. In 1675, Thomas Hutchinson, of Southold, was rated at £176. (Doc. Hist. N. Y. ii. 260.) In 1686, Martha was again a widow, having in her family 3 males and 2 females. In 1698, her name is on census list of Southold, as a widow, with the names of the Hutcheson children, and a Hannah Case. (Doc. Hist. i. 453.) Respecting Thomas Hutchinson, see Drake's Boston, 227, and vol. xx. N. E. Reg. 355, and Moore's Index of Southold, p. 24. Respecting Henry Case, see Moore's Index of Southold, p. 11, 64.

Ch. Thomas, etc.

Mary's name is written Curwin, Corwine, Corwin, and Curran. Her father-in-law was also a Thomas Smith, of Boston. His will, (1688,) mentions his wife Rebecca, and five children, namely, Annie, Thomas, John, Elizabeth, and Rebecca. They were all living in 1706. Thomas, their son, (who married Mary Corwin,) was Captain of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company. His mother's name was Rebecca Glover, daughter of Habakkuk Glover and Hannah Eliot, of Boston. Hannah was the only daughter of Rev. John Eliot, the famous missionary to the Indians. (See Glover Memorials, 105, 114, and Mass. Hist. and Gen. Rec.)

- 1 MATTHIAS CORWIN,¹ (the first settler of the name in America,) was probably born in England, between 1590–1600, d. Sept. 1–12th, 1658.
 M. Margaret (Morton?) (See Appendix G.)
 Ch. John, Martha, Theophilus.

His name also appears written sometimes Curwin, and even Currin, for a probable explanation of which, as well as the origin of the family, see Introduction. His name appears on the Commoner's Record at Ipswich, Mass., in 1634, as Currin, when he receives a second grant of land in that place.

* Corwine.

† Curwen.

Ipswich was settled under the lead of Rev. Nathaniel Ward. When the tide of emigration turned from the older settlements, toward the beautiful Connecticut valleys, he joined the companies which went thither, probably by selection of the citizens at Ipswich, (Felt's Ipswich, p. 55,) and his name, as Curwin, accordingly appears among the first founders of New-Haven. (Hollister, i. 506.) But about this time Rev. John Youngs with several families, arrived at New-Haven, and this company bought the east end of Long Island of the Indians, and Mr. Youngs led his families thither, and settled at Southold, in October, 1640. Matthias Corwin joined this company. (Trumbull's Connecticut, i. 119.) The record at Ipswich notes that he emigrated thence to Long Island. He received a lot of land for a house, directly opposite the present Congregational church in Southold. The new lecture-room of that church now stands on the very plot. Here he lived for eighteen years, till his death, having been in America, altogether, about twenty-five years. He died between August 31st and September 15th, 1658. On December 11th, 1656, he was appointed, together with William Wells, Lieutenant Budd, Barnabas Horton, and William Purrier, to order town affairs. They were to meet in the "meeting-house," and were to be fined twenty shillings for non-attendance, unless they could show a good reason. (Southold Records.)

On December 5th, 1655, the property of Matthias Curwin is described as follows :

(1.) House lot, 4 acres, with lot of Barnabas Horton on the west, and that of Thomas Z. Keryhes? on the east.

(2.) 18 acres of woodland, toward the north sea, (L. I. Sound,) bounded north by lands of Henry Whitnie, formerly, (now Pastor Young's,) south by lands of Thomas Moore.

(3.) 21 acres of woodland, toward the north sea, behind, bounded by Mr. Wells's (formerly Thomas Peakins's) lands east, and Mr. Hubbard's west.

(4.) 6 acres of woodland in the neck, near Tom's Creek Head ; lands of Philemon Dickinson, north, and John Hubbard s, south.

(7.) 2 acres of meadow at the head of Tom's Creek.

(8.) 15 acres of woodland, adjoining the meadow of John Tucker and John Herbert ; lands of Purrier, west, and of Henry Whitnie, east.

(9.) 3 acres of meadow, by Tom's Creek Pond ; the meadow of Pastor Young's, north, and of Lieutenant Budd, south.

(10.) $1\frac{1}{2}$ acres of arable land, in the old field, between lands of Joseph Horton, south, and John Tucker, north-west.

(11.) 2 acres of meadow, at Goose Neck, adjoining Pine Neck ; the meadow of Henry and John Scudder, (now Mr. Elton's,) lying north.

(12.) 1 acre of meadow, on north-east side of Hog Neck, Mr. Wells's meadow, (formerly Edward Ketchum's,) lying north-east.

(13.) 3 acres of woodland in the Calves Neck.

(14.) $4\frac{1}{2}$ acres of meadow, in Oyster Pond meadows, near to the south end of the hedge, about the tobacco houses. (His son John exchanged this with Gideon Youngs for a meadow lot, containing six acres, having lands of Charles Glover on the east, and the meadow of Thomas Moore, Sr., (formerly John Tuthill's,) on the west.)

(15.) A third lot of meadow at Accoboack; Jer. Vail's meadow, lying north, and Abr. Whiteharses, south-west.

(16.) A third lot of meadow at Corchacke, lying on the west side of the old fields, and extending from the head of the meadow to the sea, containing 3 acres; Joseph Horton's meadow lying west.

(17.) A fourth lot of meadow, on south side of Pechaconnicke River, containing 8 acres; Thomas Mapes's meadow, (formerly John Paine's,) west, and John Elton's, north.

(18.) 200 acres of woodland at Corchack; John Elton's land, east, and William Wells, west.

(19.) 40 acres of woodland at Corchacke; Richard Benjamin's land, north, and John Budd's meadow, south, and lying partly inclosed in said woodland.

(Southold Records, Lib. B, p. 11, on new Book, Lib. B, p. 127.)

His will, as recorded in the Southold town records, is yet preserved. The following extracts from the New-Haven records are found, referring to this will:

"A writing was presented, for the last will and testament of Matthias Curwin, but returned for legal probate. An inventory of the estate of said Matthias Curwin was presented, taken 15th of the seventh month, (1658,) by William Purrier and Charles Glover, amounting to £313 8d. That the appraisement was just, was witnessed upon by the above appraisers before

"BARNABAS HORTON."

(Extract from Hoadley's Recs. New-Haven, vol. ii. 35.)

On p. 400, he adds, "The last will and testament of Matthias Curwin, late of Southold, was presented, subscribed by John Underhill, and deposited by Barnabas Horton, at the Court, March 5th, 1660. Before William Wells, John Youngs."

The original will may possibly yet exist in the New-Haven archives. The following is a copy:

"SOUTHOLD, August 31, 1658.

"The last will & testament of me, Mathias Curwin, beinge in perfect memorie, do, in the name of our Lord God, & all men, comit my soule to God, & my bodie to the dust from whence it came. He lived successively in Morris Co., N. J., Fayette Co., Pa., Kentucky, and Ohio. He moved in 1785 from Pennsylvania to Kentucky, settling first in Mason Co., on a stream called Sharon, and afterward moved to Bourbon Co., in the same State. In 1798, he removed to the north-western territory, (now Ohio,) on account of bad land-titles in Kentucky, and settled near where the town of Lebanon, Warren Co., now stands. He was elected a Justice of the Peace, in Kentucky, and was eleven times chosen as a member of the Ohio Legislature, being sometimes speaker of the Assembly. He was also Associate Judge of the Court of Common Pleas. He was universally esteemed for his goodness of heart, his kindness to all, but especially to the poor and afflicted. He was a devoted and consistent Christian, (of the Baptist order,) which led him at length to desire respite from the turmoil of public life. He was above medium size, very stout, dark skin, black hair and eyes, and in moderately comfortable circumstances.

The Hunterdon Co., N. J., Records show him as selling land in Amwell township in 1804, which he had received by will from his father in 1781. In 1788, he removed to Washington, Bourbon Co., Ky., but the next year, the county of Mason was set off, including his residence. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, being in the battle of Trenton and other engagements. A letter of his, written April 13th, 1806, (yet preserved,) to his brother John, in New-Jersey, breathes a deep spirit of piety, and refers with pleasure to the pious spirit of John's letter to him. Richard mourns the low state of religion in Kentucky. He refers to the anti-slavery cry already heard in Kentucky, and to the distraction caused thereby in the Baptist Church, of which he was a member. Says he, "Some cry out for liberty, and others, Pharaoh-like, refuse to let them go." Another letter to the same, in 1804, is also preserved. The funeral service of Richard, preached by William Grinstead, pastor of the Baptist Church of Maysville, Ky., was printed at Lexington, Ky., 1813, but contains no historical matter.

He was licensed, and joined the Methodist itineracy, July 17th, 1817, and continued therein till 1843. He was admitted into conference at Zanesville, Ohio, in the fall of 1817. As the bounds of the conference extended then beyond the confines of Ohio, he was appointed to preach in Kentucky, and was presiding elder of the Louisville district when he died. He was a prominent minister, eminent for his piety and good judgment. In 1824, while attending conference in Baltimore, he met his cousin Jehu Corwine, and made inquiries about the family, and sent a letter to Gideon Corwine, in New-Jersey, soliciting a transcript of the family record. His letter is still preserved.

Ch. Quinton, John, Richard.

He first learned the printer's business with his father, and afterward studied law, moving to Cincinnati, Ohio. He became co-editor with his father and brother, of the Cincinnati Daily Herald. He moved to Indiana about 1833, and was admitted to the bar in 1834. In 1836, he removed to Mississippi, and took an active part in politics, as a Whig, canvassing a part of that State in 1840 for General Harrison, who was then a candidate for the presidency. He was afterward clerk of the —, the only Whig ever holding that office in that State. In 1842, he removed to Cincinnati, and founded a law partnership with Judge Oliver M. Spencer, to which firm was united, in 1853, Caleb B. Smith, afterward Secretary of the Interior under President Lincoln. Subsequently, Mr. R. B. Hays, (now Governor of Ohio,) was a member of the same firm. Mr. Corwine was a major of cavalry, and was on General Fremont's staff, in the early part of the rebellion. He subsequently served on Major H. G. Wright's staff, and on Major-General Burnside's. In 1864, he resigned, and returned to the practice of law, being United States District-Attorney for the Southern District of Ohio. He was also Judge Advocate-General, during his military service, (except during the last four months,) of Department 14, of the Department of the West 22, of the Mountain Department 30, and of the Department of the Ohio. Was Provost Marshal-General of the Mountain Department of Kentucky, and commanded the river defenses of Cincinnati during the siege in 1862. Now engaged in the practice of law in the Supreme Court of the United States, at Washington, D. C., and in the Court of Claims, and before the Mexican North-American Commission. He published, Digest Cases in High Chancery in England and America, etc., in 1845, at Cincinnati, Ohio. Svo. Allibone, in his Dictionary of Authors, says, quoting from Marvin's Legal Bibliography, "The material of this volume seems to have been carefully collected, and is very well arranged."

The following sketch is culled from the Introduction to his Journal and Letters, last edition :

He graduated at Harvard College in 1735, and then studied for the ministry ; but his health proving inadequate, he relinquished his design, when disappointment in an affair of the heart induced him to travel in England and on the continent. On his return he became a successful merchant, though his business was injured by French cruisers from Cape Breton. Accordingly, New-England undertook an expedition against Louisburg in the winter of 1744–5, and, under General Pepperell, captured that French city, which was considered a great feat for the colony. Mr. Curwen was a captain in this expedition. He was impost officer for Essex Co., 1759–74, his commission being renewed every three years ; he was judge of admiralty at the time of his departure for England. He was also a member of a club instituted for improvement in philosophy and literature in his native town, in which originated the Social Library, in 1760, and the Philosophical Library, which were afterward united, and became the foundation of the Athenæum, in 1810.

On the departure of Governor Hutchinson for England, June 1st, 1774, he signed the Salem address to that officer, expressing entire approbation of his public conduct. The governor had already received addresses from a hundred and twenty merchants of Boston ; from all the gentlemen of the law, with few exceptions ; from the magistrates of Middlesex and Plymouth, and the principal gentlemen of Salem and Marblehead, all expressing entire approbation of his public conduct, and their affectionate wishes for his prosperity. Many of these "addressers" were compelled to make public recantation in the newspapers. This Mr. Curwen refused to do, saying that conscience would not allow it; and being unwilling to live under the character of reproach which the fury of party might throw upon him, he resolved to withdraw from the impending storm. He went first to Philadelphia, and then took refuge in England, where he arrived, July, 1775, and remained there as an American loyalist during the Revolution. He returned to Salem September, 1784. During his exile he kept a journal, and wrote many letters, giving many remarks on the men and measures of the day. A selection of these was published in 1842, by George Atkinson Ward, (a great-grandson of Samuel's brother,) and has passed through several editions. It contains more information of the American loyalists than any other work. Many of the biographical notices in the earlier editions are omitted in the last, (1864,) to make room for other notices. Charles Dickens, in his Household Words, for May and June, 1853, devoted twenty-three closely-printed columns to a notice of this work. He describes Mr. Curwen as "a small, thin, precise-looking man, in a dress of grave, square cut, with a large bush-wig, sharp features, long nose and chin, a keen, restless eye, a step as active and firm as though it carried sixteen instead of sixty winters, and a complexion certainly not tanned by an English sun."

Dickens further says, "When Judge Curwen fled from the rebellious colonies, he was sixty years old; when he went back to the triumphant young republic, he was sixty-nine; and of the eventful years which formed the interval he left a curious record in a diary, ... in which those past days, with all their pains and pleasures, their hopes and their misgivings, still live for us with a vivid and singular reality. For the record was honest and genuine, as in the main the diarist himself was. He does not indeed appear to have been of the heroic stuff of martyrs. If the liberty of opinion he craved had been conceded to him, it would probably have involved nothing graver than the liberty to change his opinion; for he was clearly a man impressible by events, and would probably have saved himself a very long voyage and very great inconvenience, if he could only have held his tongue, till after the first blows were struck in the war of his fellow-citizens for independence. . . . He was a man of fair learning, and more than average accomplishment; not at all intolerant of opinions at issue with his own; in religion, a dissenter of the class still most prevalent in New-England; in his tastes, scholarly and refined, not ill-read in general literature, prone to social enjoyments, a reasonably good critic of what he saw—altogether an excellent example of the class of men out of whom the fathers and founders of that great republic sprang; and a companion not less pleasant than instructive to pass a few hours with, as I hope the reader will find."

Dickens uses Curwen's Journal as the very best picture extant of England, its cities, towns, institutions, people, manners, customs, of not quite a century ago.

Mr. Curwen had been in the commission of the peace for thirty years, and at the time of his departure for England was a judge of admiralty, in which office he was immediately succeeded by the patriotic Timothy Pickering. He returned home in the autumn of 1784, much to the satisfaction of his friends, and was never molested for his political course.

The Christian Examiner for January, 1843, has an able review of his Journal and Letters, giving copious extracts. The North-American Review, January, 1843, has also a lengthy review of the same work, having giving a partial review before. The Southern and Western Literary Messenger and Review, for January, 1847, has a reply by Mr. Ward, the editor of Curwen's Journal, to a former review in this magazine. Duyckinck also, in his Cyclopedia of American Literature, gives the Journal a favorable notice. It was first published in New-York and Boston, simultaneously, in 1842. The fourth edition, with a newly-written historical introduction, was published by Little, Brown & Co., Boston, 1864, and it is again out of print.

The surname, Curwen, of the Salem family, would have become extinct in Massachusetts with the death of Samuel Curwen, (2,) by failure of male heirs ; but at the request of the latter, the Legislature of Massachusetts passed an act permitting Samuel Curwen Ward (6) to take the name of Samuel Curwen, (when seven years of age,) by which also he became heir of Samuel Curwen, (2.)

He was taken by his father to Washington, Kentucky, in 1788. In 1808, he removed to Pike Co., Ohio. He occupied a high position in society. He was commissioner of the county for several terms, and was held in high esteem. He took a deep interest in the political affairs of the county, but was conservative and generous in his views. He was the unyielding enemy to persecution for opinion's sake, and held the right of free speech to be the great safeguard of our liberties. Upon one occasion, when political prejudice was at its highest pitch, some speakers were denied admission to the school-house, or to any place wherein to hold a meeting ; the residents of the little village being all of the opposite party, and the majority being extremely radical. The speakers repaired to the residence of Mr. Corwine, to consult with him. He was then old and feeble ; but he sprang up with the vigor of youth, proceeded to the village, opened a church which he and his neighbors had erected upon generous religious principles for all true religious congregations, and cautioned the speakers that their speeches should accord with the place, and permitted the meeting to proceed. All classes from the excitement had assembled, and the speakers, true to their friend's advice, discussed public affairs in that liberal spirit. His firmness and liberality upon that occasion was an example in that community the effects of which are apparent to the present time.

He was a Baptist, and was in the war of 1812.

(Loveland, O.)

He was originally a printer. He was associated with his brother Amos for several years in the publication of the Yazoo Banner, at Benton, Mississippi, before and after the presidential campaigns of 1840 and 1844. About 1849, he was again connected with his brother Amos and E. D. Mansfield in the publication of the old Cincinnati Chronicle, then published on the corner of Third and Hammond streets. In 1851, he joined his brother, who was then Consul at Panama. From 1858–60, he was Clerk of the Cincinnati City Council. Subsequently, for a number of years, he was Secretary of the La Fayette Insurance Company, and was at the time of his death U. S. Marshal under Mr. Thrall.

There were few citizens who were better known, or who had a larger and more attached circle of friends and acquaintances. In his nature and disposition he was preëminently social, and was the life of the society in which he moved. He possessed great information of men and things, and was exemplary and honest in all his dealings and intercourse with society. He was an excellent representative of a gentleman of the old school.

Perhaps this is the Silas who bought land in Orange Co., N. Y., in 1809 and 1824, or possibly No. 4 or 5.

- 3 SILAS,^{5 or 6} (—,) b. —, d. October 20th, 1779.

A private in Second Artillery, Rickers's Company, in Revolutionary war. He died in service. On October 13th, 1790, according to the bounty law then passed, he received (or rather his heirs) a tract of land, by letters-patent, in Cayuga Co., N. Y., being lot 61, in town of Milton, containing 500 acres. It fell to the possession of his son Silas, say the records. A Silas Corwin, of Southampton, L. I., (probably this son,) buys additional land in same county, in 1791, namely, lot 21, in town 18; again he buys land in 1794 in the same town, and in town of Homer, in 1803.

In 1799, he made his home with John Corwin, No. 5, a distant relative of his father. In 1809, he took up his residence at New-Windsor, Orange Co., N. Y., where he yet resides. A ship-carpenter. On November 12th, 1869, he dug up a stone pot in Newburg, with 650 silver Spanish dollars in it. Probably it was buried there in the Revolution.

6 SILAS,⁶ (Silas, 1,) bapt. at Mattituck, L. I., August 10th, 1755, d. April 17th, 1837.

M. Elsie Corwin, (No. 1,) April 30th, 1781. (Aquebogue Recs.)

Ch. Silas, Jabez.

Both said to be of Ketchobononek, when married. Perhaps this is the Silas who signed engagement to support Congress, in 1775. He removed from L. I. to Orange Co., N. Y., probably between 1810-20, and lived at Minisink. He was also a deacon of the Presbyterian church of West-town. He says in his will that a George Corwin must live in his house after his death. This also may be the Silas Corwin of Southampton, L. I., in 1809, who sold land to Ezra Corwin, in Homer, Cortland Co., N. Y., in that year. We find also a Silas Corwin, Jr., buying land in Onondaga Co., N. Y., in 1791, and he is described as a blacksmith, of Setauket, L. I. Again, he buys land in same county in 1799. In 1803, a Silas Corwin, of Southampton, L. I., buys one soldier's right of land in Onondaga Co., N. Y. (See Silas, Nos. 3 and 4.)

Ch. Daniel, Theophilus, David, Mary, Mehetable, Bethia, Phebe.

In 1655, he had lands at Southold, L. I., and also lands and a meadow at Aquebogue. Hence the above proposed date of his birth. He must therefore have been born very soon after his father's arrival at Ipswich, Mass., if born in America. That the above date of death, 1692, belongs to this Theophilus, is probable, as he had also a son Theophilus, but only one such name occurs on census list in 1698, whereas if the father were yet living, there would have been two. In 1660, he was engaged in a suit with Henry Case. In 1683, he was rated at £84. (Doc. Hist. N. Y. ii. 310.) In 1658, a Theophilus Corwin and Mary are witnesses in a deed of Tustin to Franklin. In 1686, he had 4 males and 3 females in his family, and in same year, sells land to A. Whittier. The above names of children, who evidently belong to the third generation, (as their names are enumerated in the census lists of the Documentary History of New-York for 1698,) probably all belong to this Theophilus, as the children of his only brother, John, are mentioned in the will of the latter. (See John, No. 1.) These names are also scattered in the said census list, indicating thereby that the family was broken up, the father being deceased. On the other hand, the well-known names of the children of his brother John, who was yet living in 1698, are found together. (Doc. Hist. N. Y. i. 450-455.)

This Theophilus and wife are buried at Mattituck, on the east side of the cemetery, beneath a small blue-stone slab, still remaining, (1871.) His name stands alone in census list of 1698, (Doc. Hist. N. Y. i. 450,) indicating that he was not then married. In 1702, sells land to Peter Simons. In 1703, gives land at Aquebogue to Daniel Corwin, no doubt his brother. In 1704, sells land to his cousin, John Corwin, No. 2. (Moore's Index of Southold, p. 74.) His will may be found in Lib. 23, New-York City.

A Theophilus Corwin (Curwin, Curran) bought land of William Hudson, at Minisink, Orange Co., N. Y., in 1765, (or possibly as early as 1758.) (See Records of Deeds at Goshen.) He was a harness-maker by trade. There was a Theophilus Corwin who fell in battle at the taking of Fort Montgomery by the British in the Revolutionary war. (Letter of Silas Corwin, of New-Windsor, N. Y., to the author.) David Corwin of New-Paltz, says that his grandfather fell at Fort Montgomery, but he thinks the name was Timothy. The family records are lost. At any rate, his grandmother's name, before marriage, was Anna Jaynes. It may be, that a Timothy (with wife Anna Jaynes) should be put down as son of Theophilus, 4, and Mary, David, George, and Jonathan, perhaps, as the children of this Timothy.

(Lebanon, O.)

His early education was obtained under such limited advantages as were common in a newly settled country.* He first entered school in the fall of 1798. The building was a low, rough log-cabin, put up in a few hours by the neighbors who formed the little settlement, and stood on the north bank of Turtle Creek, about half a mile west of the place where the town of Lebanon, O., now stands. This school was taught first by the late Judge Dunlevy. In 1806, Rev. J. Grigg commenced a school in Lebanon, and taught there for two years. Thomas could only attend during the winter, and these two winters, when he was between twelve and fourteen years of age, completed most of his college education. He was, however, an industrious reader at home.

At the call for troops in 1812, after the surrender of General Hull, Thomas's father sent his team to aid in furnishing supplies to the suffering American army of the north, and Thomas, a lad of seventeen, became the teamster.

While subsequently laboring on the farm, he received an injury on his knee, which disabled him for some time. During these tedious months he had recourse to books belonging to his brother Matthias, and made rapid attainments in knowledge. After assisting his brother for a while as Clerk

* For the following sketch of Hon. Thomas Corwin, the author is indebted chiefly to the memoir prefixed to the volume of "Corwin's Speeches," by Isaac Strohm. He has freely used or abridged the language of this article, as seemed expedient. Mr. A. H. Dunlevy wrote a short sketch of Mr. C., for Appleton's Cyclopædia. Mr. William Green, (formerly of Cincinnati, and more recently Lieutenant-Governor of Rhode Island,) in The American Review, for September, 1847, p. 310, gives a brief sketch of his life, and a criticism upon his Mexican war speech. It concludes with a glowing eulogy on his personal character. A writer in the Boston Journal, (March, 1870,) gives political and personal recollections of him, recounting a number of anecdotes, and querying whether he is not of Massachusetts descent. This drew forth a letter from Hon. Charles W. Upham, in a subsequent issue of the Journal, who endeavored to show the probability of his descent from the Salem Curwens. His arguments had every appearance of probability, but were nevertheless erroneous, as the present volume shows. The author would suggest the propriety of a new edition of "Corwin's Speeches," with the continuance of his biography to the close of his life. Such an edition, he believes, would be at once exhausted by the members of the Corwin family, scattered through the United States. But few of them, outside of Ohio, ever saw the volume alluded to. An enterprising publisher, with the addresses of the members of the family as herein given, could easily dispose of a new edition.

of the Court of Common Pleas, in the year 1816, he commenced the study of law under Joshua Collett, Esq., who was afterward successively president of that judicial circuit, and one of the judges of the Supreme Court of the State. Mr. Corwin was admitted to the bar in 1817. He at once took a commanding position as an advocate, and was looked upon as a leading spirit by the legal profession.

His public career began in 1822, when he was elected a member of the lower branch of the General Assembly of Ohio. On retiring from the Legislature, for several years he devoted himself assiduously to his profession, which became extensive and profitable. In 1829, he was returned to the Legislature under circumstances much to his credit, as a man worthy of public confidence. A merely partisan "Jackson" ticket was nominated. But the sturdy yeomanry of that district rebuked the attempt, and Mr. Corwin, (against his inclination,) and ex-Governor Morrow, as the people's candidates, irrespective of party, were elected by decided majorities.

In 1830, he was sent to the Congress of the United States. Before this, he had often been solicited to become a candidate, but had declined. The district (Warren and Butler Counties) had given a decided majority for Jackson, to whose elevation to the presidency Mr. Corwin had always been opposed. But by his personal popularity he overcame this partisan opposition, and was elected by a large vote. He was reelected four times successively, after this, to the same high office, (1830-40.) He resigned on February 22d, 1840, to take effect in May following, because of his nomination to the governorship of Ohio.

During the campaign of 1840, he became extensively known as an effective public speaker, and was a principal instrument in swelling the unexampled majority of General Harrison. His own majority for governor was greater than was ever attained before in Ohio. He served but one term, however, as his former competitor, through a diversion in favor of a (then) ultra anti-slavery candidate, led him in the contest of 1842 by a plurality of some five thousand votes.

In 1844, he was placed at the head of the Clay electoral ticket in Ohio. He was soon after elected United States Senator, by the State Legislature, both branches of which were then, for the first time in several years, anti-Democratic. He took his seat with the accession of Mr. Polk to the Presidency in 1845, and served until July 22d, 1850, when, at the invitation of President Fillmore, he entered upon the duties of Secretary of the Treasury. At the end of that administration, in 1853, he resumed his professional duties in Cincinnati, in which he continued till the fall of 1858, having his residence at Lebanon. Assenting to pressing solicitations, and under a deep sense of duty to his country, he consented to be a candidate again for Congress, and was triumphantly elected. He was in the heat of the great discussion, pending the breaking out of the Rebellion. In 1861, he was appointed Minister to Mexico, by President Lincoln, but declining health compelled him to resign in 1864.

Thus, without the advantages of a liberal education, he attained a high degree of eminence. The fire of true genius and the possession of real merit were unmistakably evident. His talent for effective oratory early displayed itself. This, with his keenness of discrimination, was the cause of his rapid strides to distinction as an advocate at the bar. His eloquence was unequalled, in his day, in Ohio.

“When addressing a jury, he exhibited all that opulence of legal and miscellaneous information, and philosophic reflection, which are the result of a life of study of books and of human nature. No one could more readily or more delicately sweep every chord by which the sympathies of the heart could be touched, or find a more direct avenue to whatever feeling, passion, sentiment, or prejudice it might be necessary to reach to obtain consent to his reasoning. The infinite humor playing in his countenance, and ever anticipating the utterances of his eloquent tongue, but added to his power to overwhelm with ridicule any unfortunate position taken by an opponent; and though this sometimes was calculated to divert the auditor from the more ponderous logic which he used, it carried with it, nevertheless, an undercurrent of sound argument which did not fail to convince. All his varied acquirements he used, wherever it might be desirable, to give strong probability to a mere possible fact; and he brought up the known to prove the unknown by a masterly comparative course of illustration.”

While in the Ohio Legislature he distinguished himself by a speech against public whippings for petty larcenies. It was proposed to reenact such a law, which had recently been repealed. It was maintained by its advocates that nothing was more appropriate as a punishment for theft than whipping, and that it would save the tax, which was becoming onerous, of supporting such prisoners. His speech presented the repugnance felt by every person of refined sensibility to such a penalty. The bill was defeated.

As a representative in Congress he was industrious and faithful to the trust reposed in him. His course was that of a careful, thoughtful, conscientious man. His appearance in debate was rare, but always effective. The announcement of his name produced profound stillness in the House, except as it was broken by demonstrations such as wit, argument, and eloquence like his must occasionally produce. His impromptu speech on the Surplus Revenue is a masterly effort. His well-remembered reply to General Cray is unapproachable for overwhelming sarcasm and ridicule, and its abounding good humor. His speech on the constitutionality of Internal Improvements by the general government the reporters failed to write out, as they could not do him justice, requesting him to write it out himself from their imperfect notes. This, however, he did not find it convenient to do, and hence one of his best speeches has never been published.

When canvassing the State in behalf of himself and General Harrison, in 1840, his power to sway the masses became widely known. From the circumstance of his driving his father's team with provisions for the army in 1812, he acquired the sobriquet of “The Wagoner Boy,” and this now became a rallying-word of the campaign. There was a happy coincidence in the object accomplished by the wagoner candidate for Governor and the achievements of the military candidate for President. It was to succor the army under command of Harrison that the lad, Tom Corwin, performed his humble mission. There was much in it to touch the sympathies of a grateful people, and their feelings burst forth in song during that exciting campaign.

"Success to you, Tom Corwin !

Tom Corwin, our true hearts love you !

Ohio has no nobler son,

In worth there's none above you ;

And she will soon bestow

On you her highest honor,

And then our State will proudly show

Without a stain upon her.

"Success to you, Tom Corwin !

We've seen, with warm emotion,

Your faithfulness to freedom's cause,

Your boldness, your devotion ;

And we will ne'er forget

That you our rights have guarded ;

Our grateful hearts shall pay the debt,

And worth shall be rewarded."

etc., etc., etc.

But the office of Governor of Ohio, did not afford much scope to exhibit the talents for which Mr. Corwin was most remarkable. His annual messages to the General Assembly, however, are model documents of the kind, brief in form, clear and perspicuous in style. The following extract is from his first message :

"It is in times of profound tranquillity, when the people are undisturbed by the tumults of war, that the duties of enlightened patriotism invite us to the grateful task of giving depth and permanency to our free institutions. It is only at such periods that a commonwealth can hope to deliberate calmly and successfully upon systems of policy calculated to stimulate industry, by giving it legal assurance that it shall be protected in the enjoyment of its acquisitions ; to strengthen general morality by laws which shall tend to suppress vice and crime in all their forms ; to give energy and independence of character to all classes by measures which will promote, as far as practicable, equality of condition, and thus establish rational liberty for ourselves, and give hope of its continuance for ages to come.

"Of measures which contribute to this end, education, comprehending moral as well as intellectual instruction, is of the first importance. Under a constitution like ours, which imparts to every citizen the same civil rights, education must remain a subject of vital interest in reference to the general welfare of the state. If we are to trust the lessons of history, we are brought to the conclusion that government is, and always has been, the most efficient of all the causes which operate in forming the character and shaping the destinies of nations. Where the right of suffrage is so unrestricted as with us, government is necessarily the offspring of all the people, and will reflect the moral and intellectual features of its parent with unvarying fidelity.

"If the operations of the most profound thinkers had left us in doubt upon this interesting subject, the familiar history of the last century alone has furnished numerous and melancholy proofs that no people to whom moral and intellectual culture have been denied are capable of achieving or enjoying the blessings of rational liberty, founded upon any system which tolerates popular agency in the conduct of public affairs. So profoundly impressed with this great truth were the framers of our constitution that they did not leave it to the judgment of the future to decide. They did not allow the subject of education to remain in that class which might be, in after times, adopted or rejected upon the doubtful test of expediency. They incorporated it into the constitution. In the 3d section of the 8th article of the Constitution it is expressly declared that 'religion, morality, and knowledge being essentially necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of instruction shall forever be encouraged by legislative provision, not inconsistent with the rights of conscience.' In the schools, the encouragement of which is thus enjoined as a proper subject of legislative provision, it is apparent that the makers of the Constitution intended to combine moral with intellectual instruction. All experience and observation of man's nature have shown that merely intellectual improvement is but a small advance in the accomplishment of a proper civilization. Without morals, civilization only displays energy, and that the more fearful in its powers and purposes as it wants the restraining and softening influences which alone give it a direction to objects of utility or benevolence."

At the Whig State Convention, held at Columbus in January, 1844, over which Mr. Corwin presided, a unanimous nomination was tendered him to be the candidate for governor a third time. This he declined in a masterly speech, never to be forgotten by those who heard it. Ex-Governor Morrow then submitted the following resolution, which was adopted with loud acclaim :

"Resolved, That in THOMAS CORWIN we recognize a patriot, a statesman, an orator, a man of the people, and a champion of their rights—a man whom Ohio is proud to call her own. We esteem him and we love him."

This resolution and the enthusiastic call of the vast multitude brought forth a response from Governor Corwin, who for an hour and a half enchaind his audience in breathless attention, or called from them deafening shouts of applause, as he overwhelmed the pretended friends of the people, who, in the name of democracy, were attempting to subvert our free institutions.

When in the Senate, during President Polk's administration, he did not take much part in debate, until the Mexican war arose. He favored the proposition to give our soldiers bounty-land, and of always dealing most liberally with them. But his great Mexican war speech, on the Three Million bill, is one of the finest specimens of American eloquence. He boldly asserted what he esteemed to be the truth, regardless of the unpopularity of his sentiments. He dared to think as his conscience bade him, and opposed any further appropriations for the prosecution of the war. His friends thought his course impolitic, though correct, and his enemies did not fail to use his utterances to his political injury, distorting his sentiments to suit their own purposes. But all upright men commended the honest expression of his conscientious convictions upon a subject so fraught with momentous consequences.

Upon the conclusion of the Mexican war, the question of the extension of slavery over the new territory was the one exciting theme. On July 24th, 1848, Mr. Corwin discussed the powers of Congress in reference to this subject, with all the ability of a profound constitutional lawyer and well-read statist. Upon this speech the Louisville Journal then remarked :

"In the speech on the Compromise bill, Mr. Corwin has displayed in an eminent degree all the great features of his massive mind. The oft-repeated sophistries of slavery, the formulas that have passed from mouth to mouth among those who love to be deceived, those paltry, rickety things that seem to be heir-looms of perpetualism, are trampled into dust by Mr. Corwin with as much disdain as Mirabeau spurned and trampled on the formulas of royalty. When did falsehood ever receive a quietus more effectually than this mendicant plea of the ultras for more slave territory, on account of their worn-out lands?" . . .

"A leading feature of Mr. Corwin's character is devotion to truth; and he follows her paths with the enthusiasm, the spirit, and fortitude of a martyr. In the worship of that heavenly essence, he discards all personal considerations; he never seems to pause to ask what may be the personal consequence of any thing he may feel required to do—it is enough for him to learn where truth marks the line of duty, to secure his obedience.

"This trait of Mr. Corwin was eminently displayed on the Mexican war question. His lucid mind as clearly saw the consequences of his course upon that question as his experience now feels them. He deliberately surveyed his ground, and duty made him brave the fires of persecution and the anathemas of party. It would be as easy to make a slave of Mr. Corwin as it would be to make him a demagogue. He stood up before the country as a man who dared to do what he considered right; he made no appeal to the aura popularis; he felt the spirit of the ancient sage expressed in the sentiment, 'I love Socrates, I love Plato; but I love truth more than either.'"

"He towered in the Senate like a giant among pigmies. Every one that couched a lance with him seemed to be ridiculously small. . . . There is not a man in the country who can strip a subject of its verbiage more effectually than Mr. Corwin. With a keen and bold eye, and a steady hand, he dissects the sophistries and false logic of the advocates of error, and he follows falsehood through all its doubling and involutions with a practical skill which no ingenuity can elude.

"Nothing seems to escape his eye in analyzing an untenable position. His powers of sarcasm are great, and they sparkle amidst the strength of logic like gems that deck the brow of purity and beauty."

In the Treasury Department, he pursued in the main the line of policy of his predecessor, Mr. Meredith. But during Fillmore's administration, Congress and the Executive did not agree upon the financial policy of the nation. Hence Mr. Corwin's suggestions that there be either a change in the ad valorem system, imposing specific duties on all articles to which they might be safely applied; or that the home, instead of the foreign valuation, be introduced; or that the rates upon a variety of proper articles should be increased—were not adopted. The influx of gold from California stimulated the importation of foreign goods, which filled the treasury for the time, though the prosperity was illusive. A large surplus over the annually accruing liabilities of the government remained in the sub-treasury vaults when the term of the administration expired. He then (1853) resumed his profession.

One characteristic of all his speeches was his earnest exhortations to the proper and unflinching exercise of the elective franchise. He never failed to admonish the people that they had the power to make and unmake rulers, and that the evils in government are the results either of their own remissness in refusing to vote, or in their not taking pains to vote intelligently. He appealed to the people to exercise the reason and the conscience which God had given them, to decide how they should vote.

1 WILLIAM,⁴ (Matthias, 2,) b. —, 1700-10.

Hon. Thomas Corwin, of Ohio, informed the writer in 1859, that his great-grandfather was William. But his uncle, David, (8,) is quite sure that his grandfather's name was Jesse, and upon the whole this seems the most probable. Possibly the two names should be combined, as Jesse-William. (See Jesse, No. 1.)

2 WILLIAM,⁵ (John, 3,) b. February 21st, 1744, d. December 1st, 1818.

M. Hannah Reeves, of Mattituck, January 14th, 1768. She was born May 23d, 1747, and died about 1840.

Ch. John C., Sarah, Hannah, William, James, Joseph, Nathaniel, Elizabeth, Daniel, Ebenezer, Joshua G.

He moved to Chester, N. J., from Long Island, about 1774. He was a soldier in the French and Indian war, a lieutenant in the Revolution, and a Representative in the New-Jersey Legislature. His original homestead, (1½ miles north of Chester, N. J.,) is now possessed by a Mr. Kelsey. As early as 1776, he takes a mortgage of John Dickerson, of Roxbury, Morris Co., N. J., for lands on Black River lying next to Joseph Corwin's land. In 1783, he takes a mortgage of Silas Reeve, for lands in Roxbury, and in 1787, another of Samuel Morris. In 1800, he buys 111 acres of land of Aaron Stark, in Roxbury, and after this his name occurs very frequently on the records. His will is recorded at Morristown.

3 WILLIAM,⁶ or ⁶? (George, 1,) b. —, 1770–80.

(A William Corwin, (or Curwin,) and Rebecca, his wife, were of New-Windsor, Orange Co., N. Y., in 1795; in 1801–7 and 1810, they were of Milton, (Genoa,) Cayuga Co., N. Y. Perhaps identical with William, 3.)

M. Leah Johnson.

Ch. Elizabeth, Sarah.

He was a seafaring man. He lived in New-York City from 1790 till his death, after which his widow kept store at 8 Front street, till 1830. The writer remembers a vault in front of the Presbyterian church in Wall street, (which church was removed to Jersey City, in 1844,) which was inscribed as "Leah Corwin's Vault," indicating their place of worship and burial.

Ch. Sarah A., Jennette M., Thornton J., Harriet.

He was first a farmer, at Scotchtown, but moved to Ansonia, Ct., in 1854, and is now engaged in that place in the manufacture of sheet-brass. In 1862, he enlisted in Company B, Regiment 20, Connecticut Volunteers, and was a sergeant throughout the war. Was in the army of the Potomac from 1862 to the fall of 1863; then in the army of the West, and marched with General Sherman to the sea. This regiment has the names of fourteen battles on its flag, among which are Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, and Atlanta. He never drank a drop of liquor nor saw a single sick day during the war.

APPENDIX A.

THE NAME CORVINUS, AND THE ROMAN CORVINI.

It may not be without interest, at least to some, to give a fuller history of this name. For although, of course, no pretense of connection with it, as it existed in Roman times, is thought of, yet, since it has been borne by several persons eminent in influence and in virtue, it may be not only interesting, but perhaps useful, to refer to them—the reader ever remembering that the relation is only nominal.

CORVINUS was a cognomen in the Valeria Gens, and merely a lengthened adjective form of Corvus. It originated in the Valerian family in the following manner:

(From Anthon's Classical Dictionary, p. 1370.)

"Valerius Corvus (or Corvinus) was a tribune of the soldiers under Camillus. When the Roman army was challenged by one of the Senones, remarkable for his strength and stature, Valerius undertook to engage him, and obtained an easy victory by means of a raven (corvus) that assisted him, by attacking the face of the Gaul, whence his surname of Corvus, or Corvinus, B.C. 349. Valerius triumphed over the Etrurians and the neighboring states that made war against Rome, and was six times honored with the consulship. He died in the one hundredth year of his age, B.C. 271, admired and regretted for many private and public virtues." (Val. Max. 8, 13. Liv. 7, 27.)

He was also appointed dictator twice, and had the honors of the curule chair twenty-one times.*

But Marcus Valerius Messala Corvinus was a still more eminent man. Gibbon† says concerning him, "The fame of Messala has been scarcely equal to his merit. In the earliest youth he was recommended by Cicero to the friendship of Brutus. He followed the standard of the republic till it was broken in the fields of Philippi; he then accepted and deserved the favor of the most moderate of the conquerors; and uniformly asserted his freedom and dignity in the court of Augustus. The triumph of Messala was justified by the conquest of Aquitain. As an orator, he disputed the palm of eloquence with Cicero himself. Messala cultivated every muse, and was the patron of every man of genius. He spent his evenings in philosophic conversation with Horace; assumed his place at table between Delia and Tibullus; and amused his leisure by encouraging the poetical talents of young Ovid."‡ He was born about B.C. 64, and died B.C. 8.

* Smith's Dictionary of Greek and Roman Biography gives an interesting and much fuller sketch of this man, with many references to the Roman authors. See also Niebuhr's Rome, iii. 124.

† Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, ii. 117, note.

‡ The above note in Gibbon induced Rev. Edward Berwick to search out and write as full a biography of this man as the material allowed. He has made a very interesting little volume, which was published at Edinburgh, 1813. Anthon condenses it in his Classical Dictionary, art. Messala. The Roman writers contain many references to him, all, without exception, of a very complimentary nature.

Cicero's fifteenth epistle to Brutus, who was then in Macedonia, thus describes Messala Corvinus, who was also the bearer of the letter. Cicero is lamenting over the prospective downfall of the republic :

"You have Messala now with you. It is not possible, therefore, for me to explain by letter, though ever so accurately drawn, the present state of our affairs, as exactly as he can, who not only knows them all more perfectly, but can describe them more elegantly than any man. For I would not have you imagine, Brutus, that for probity, constancy, and zeal for the republic, there is any one equal to him ; so that eloquence, in which he wonderfully excels, scarce finds a place among his other praises : since even in that his wisdom shines most eminent, by his having formed himself with so much judgment and skill to the truest manner of speaking. Yet his industry all the while is so remarkable, and he spends so much time in study, that he seems to owe but little to his parts, which are still the greatest. But, I am carried too far by my love for him ; for it is not the purpose of this epistle to praise Messala, especially to Brutus, to whom his virtue is not less known than to myself ; and these very studies, which I am praising, still more : whom, when I could not part with without regret, I comforted myself with reflecting, that, by his going away to you, as it were to my second self, he both discharged his duty, and pursued the surest path to glory."

Corvinus was among the many proscribed to death at that time, for his strong republican principles. But he was saved by his absence from Italy. The traitors afterward sought to induce him to join them by a special proclamation of his pardon, but he spurned their offer. At the battle of Philippi, when the republic was overthrown, he commanded a legion. That fatal day, after supping with some friends, Cassius took Messala by the hand, and pressing it close, said courteously in Greek, "Bear witness, Messala, that I am reduced to the same necessity as was Pompey the Great, of hazarding the liberty of my country upon one battle."* But Cassius fell, and with him the liberty of Rome. Messala and Bibulus had the command of the broken republican forces offered them ; but they declined, saying, "It has cost Rome too much blood already, and we must yield to the storm, and fall under the power of the strongest."† Velleius Paterculus says,‡ "Messala Corvinus, a young man of shining character, who, next to Brutus and Cassius, possessed the greatest influence of any in the camp, and whom some solicited to take the command, chose to be indebted to safety to Caesar's kindness, rather than to try any further the chance of arms. Nor did any circumstance attending his victories afford greater joy to Caesar than the saving of Corvinus ; nor was there ever an instance of greater gratitude or more affectionate attachment than Corvinus showed to Caesar in return." Berwick says, "He retained his freedom and dignity in a despotic court, which his understanding condemned and his heart reprobated." He at first joined the army of Antony, and followed him through his Syrian and Egyptian campaigns, but, disgusted with Antony's life, he afterward left him, and joined the party of Augustus, whose life he saved, after a certain defeat, though Augustus had once proscribed him to death. After a certain victory of Messala, he replied to the praise which Augustus bestowed on him, "I have always taken the best and justest side." Tibullus wrote an elegy§ in praise of Messala, consisting of 211 lines, B.C. 32.

His name also occurs on the Capitoline marbles for his victory in Aquitain, and an ancient medal is described by a French writer, which was struck to his honor.

"He had the singular merit of supporting an unblemished character in a most despotic court, without making a sacrifice of those principles which he fought for in the fields of Philippi ; and the genuine integrity of his character was so deeply impressed on all parties that it attracted a general admiration in a most corrupt age. He was brave, eloquent, and virtuous. He was liberal, attached to letters, and his patronage was considered as "the surest passport to the gates of fame." No writer, either ancient or modern, has ever named Messala without some tribute of praise. Cicero soon perceived he possessed an assemblage of excellent qualities, which he would the more have admired, had he lived to see them expanded and matured to perfection. Messala was his disciple. Quintilian says his style was neat and elegant; and in all his speeches he displayed a superior nobility. In the Dialogue of Orators, he is said to have excelled Cicero in the sweetness and correctness of his style. His taste for poetry and polite literature will admit of little doubt, when we call to mind that he was protected by Caesar, favored by Mæcenas, esteemed by Horace, and loved by Tibullus. Horace, in one of his beautiful odes,* praises Corvinus in the happiest strains of poetry, calls the day he intended to pass with him propitious, and promises to treat him with some of his most excellent wine. "For," says the poet, "though Messala is conversant with all the philosophy of Socrates and the academy, he will not decline such entertainment as my humble board can afford." The modest Tibullus flattered himself with the pleasing hopes of Messala's paying him a visit in the country, where "My beloved Delia shall assist in doing the honors for so noble a guest,"† says he. The rising genius of Ovid was admired and encouraged by Messala; and this condescension the exiled bard has acknowledged in an epistle to his son Messalinus, dated from the cold shores of the Euxine. In this letter Ovid calls Messala his friend, the light and director of all his literary pursuits. . . . Tacitus seems fond of praising Messala, . . . and considers him among the few great characters who have risen to the highest honors by their integrity and eloquence. Even Tiberius himself, when a youth, took him for his master and pattern in speaking,‡ though not in virtue. Messala made eloquence his chief study, though no specimen remains by which to judge of his excellence in this art.

Messala Corvinus married Terentia, the widow first of Cicero, and then of Salust. She married again a fourth time a Roman senator, after Messala's death. Messala left two sons, Marcus and Lucius. The elder became consul in B.C. 3, and was called Messalinus. He distinguished himself in the Pannonian war. He also inherited his father's eloquence. Lucius assumed the name of Cotta, from his maternal line. Both brothers were also friends of Ovid.

JOHN HUNYADY CORVINUS.

AFTER the death of Albert of Hungary, the States offered the crown to Wladislaus, of Poland; but shortly after, the widow of Albert had a son, called Ladislaus Posthumus. This was the cause of dissension, and Amurath of Turkey prepared at the same time to invade the country. Wladislaus conquered in the struggle, and it was just at this time that Hunyadi began to display his military capacities. He was surnamed CORVINUS. The origin of Hunyadi is shrouded in mystery. Probably he was a Wallachian, and son of George Hunyadi, vaywod of Wallachia, during the reign of Sigismund. As to his surname Corvinus, some derive it from his estate, Piatre de Corvo; others from his ancestors.

Having been made vaywod of Transylvania by Wladislaus, Hunyadi met Amurath on the plains of Wallachia, and defeated him. The Turks then entered Servia, and were again defeated. The Hungarians then proceeded to Bulgaria, conquered Nissa, and gained a signal victory before Sophia, 1443, and hoped to be able to drive the Turks out of Europe. Treaties were made between the Hungarians and Castriot, Prince of Epirus, and Paleologus, Emperor of the East. The Sultan was afraid, and sought peace, which was concluded for ten years. He gave up his claim to Wallachia, promised to evacuate Bulgaria, and release Christian prisoners. The treaty was sworn to on the Bible and the Koran. But the Pope's legate said it was void, for it concerned all Christendom, and the Pope had not indorsed it. Hunyadi tried to avert this perfidy, but in vain. Wladislaus entered Bulgaria, but the Sultan compelled him to retreat to Varna. Hunyadi thought it unsafe to stand a siege at Varna, from a lack of food; hence the battle was without, on a plain. It raged for three days and three nights, without result. On the fourth day, Hunyadi, charging with his horse, put to flight the Janisaries. The Sultan was flying. But two bishops now, jealous of Hunyadi, left their positions, contrary to his orders, and pursued the flying enemy. This turned the day against him. Hunyadi, with a few followers, escaped. The Sultan gained Wallachia and Servia. Great confusion followed. Hunyadi was made governor. In 1452, the captive prince, Ladislaus Posthumus, was released, and Hunyadi, resigning his position, was made chief general. All Europe wanted to help Hungary, but the suceor, when needed, failed. The Sultan determined to conquer Hungary, and in 1456 appeared before Belgrade with 150,000 men. The Hungarian king, by advice of Hunyadi, fled to Vienna. Hunyadi quickly raised 10,000 troops, and hastened to the relief of the city. The fate of Europe hung on this battle. After a siege of several weeks, the haughty Ottoman conqueror left 24,000 men dead on the field, and his army fled to Adrianople. The great fatigue brought on Hunyadi a sickness, of which he died a month later, September 10th, 1456. Of his two sons, Ladislaus and Matthias, the former was cruelly murdered by the king. The king himself soon after died, at Prague. Three foreign candidates appeared for the throne; but the nobles desired a native ruler, and chose Hunyadi's son, Matthias Corvinus. (British Cyclopædia, art. Hungary.)

Hunyadi was, at his death, eighty years old. He said to his spiritual comforter, "I am prepared for my journey; my whole life has only been a preparation to receive that Friend who is to lead me to the throne of my Omnipotent King. I have served him faithfully, and, amidst all the storms and perils of life, maintained the post of duty on which He placed me. He will graciously receive his soldier, worn out in his service, and grant him rest in the dwellings of his saints." Turning to his sons, he said, "Let the actions and example of your father bear fruit in your hearts; continue in the path of uprightness and virtue, which I have pointed out to you as the safest; I leave you the fear of God and the love of your country as an abiding inheritance; all else that falls to you from me belongs to fortune." (Kosuth's Hungary, p. 86.)

Hallam, in his Middle Ages, p. 245, says, that while "the crown was permitted to rest on the head of young Ladislaus, the regency was allotted by the States of Hungary to a native warrior, John Hunniades. This hero stood in the breach twelve years against the Turkish power, and, though frequently defeated, remained unconquered in defeat. If the renown of Hunniades may seem exaggerated by the partiality of writers who lived under the reign of his son, it is confirmed by more unequivocal evidence, by the dread and hatred of the Turks, and by the deference of a jealous aristocracy to a man of no distinguished birth. He surrendered to young Ladislaus a trust that he had exercised with perfect fidelity; but his merit was too great to be forgiven, and the court never treated him with cordiality. The last and most splendid service of Hunniades was the relief of Belgrade, 1456. That strong city was besieged by Mohammed II. three years after Constantinople fell into their hands, and its capture would have laid open all Hungary. A tumultuary army, chiefly collected by the preaching of a friar, was intrusted to Hunniades; he penetrated into the city, and, having repulsed the Turks in a fortunate sally, wherein Mohammed was wounded, had the honor of compelling him to raise the siege in confusion. The relief of Belgrade was more important in its effect than in its immediate circumstances. It revived the spirit of Europe, which had been appalled by the unceasing victories of the infidels."

Janos Hunyadi is the Hungarian form of his name, which is Anglicized by Gibbon to John Huniades. Appletons' Cyclopædia (Article Hunyadi) gives his surname "Corvinus, (Hollósi)." See also Universal History and Moreri. Hunyadi was born 1376; died 1456.

Says Gibbon, in his Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, vol. vi., 358: "From an humble or at least a doubtful origin, the merit of John Huniades promoted him to the command of the Hungarian armies. His father was a Wallachian, his mother a Greek; and the claims of the Wallachians, with the surname of Corvinus, from the place of his nativity, might suggest a thin pretense for mingling his blood with the patricians of ancient Rome. In his youth he served in the wars of Italy, and was retained, with twelve horsemen, by the Bishop of Zagrab. The valor of the White Knight of Wallachia" (as he was styled) "was soon conspicuous; he increased his fortunes by a noble and wealthy marriage, and in the defense of the Hungarian borders he won, in the same year, three battles against the Turks. By his influence, Ladislaus of Poland obtained the crown of Hungary, and the important service was rewarded by the title and office of Waivod of Transylvania. The first of Julian's crusades" (Julian was legate of the Pope) "added two Turkish laurels on his brow, and in the public distress the fatal errors of Varna were forgotten. During the minority and absence of Ladislaus of Austria, (the titular king,) Huniades was elected supreme captain and governor of Hungary; and if envy at first was silenced by terror, a reign of twelve years supposes the arts of policy as well as of war. Yet the idea of a consummate general is not delineated in his campaigns; the White Knight fought with the hand rather than the head, as the chief of desultory barbarians, who attack without fear and fly without shame; and his military life is composed of a romantic alternative of victories and escapes. By the Turks, who employed his name to frighten their perverse children, he was corruptly denominated Janeus Lain, or the Wicked. Their hatred is the proof of their esteem; the kingdom which he guarded was inaccessible to their arms; and they felt him most daring and formidable when they fondly believed the captain and his country irrevocably lost. Instead of confining himself to a defensive war, four years after the defeat of Varna he again penetrated into the heart of Bulgaria, and in the plain of Cossova sustained, till the third day, the shock of the Ottoman army, four times more numerous than his own. As he fled alone through the woods of Wallachia, the hero was surprised by two robbers; but while they disputed a gold chain that hung at his neck, he recovered his sword, slew the one, terrified the other, and after new perils of captivity or death, consoled by his presence an afflicted kingdom. But the last and most glorious action of his life was the defense of Belgrade against the powers of Mohammed the Second in person. After a siege of forty days, the Turks, who had already entered the town, were compelled to retreat; and the joyful nations celebrated Huniades and Belgrade as the bulwarks of Christendom. About a month after this great deliverance, the champion expired; and his most splendid epitaph is the regret of the Ottoman prince, who sighed that he could no longer hope for revenge against the single antagonist who had triumphed over his arms. On the first vacancy of the throne, Matthias Corvinus," (his son,) "a youth of eighteen years of age, was elected and crowned by the grateful Hungarians. His reign was prosperous and long. Matthias aspired to the glory of a conqueror and a saint, but his purest merit is the encouragement of learning; and the Latin orators and historians who were invited from Italy by the son, have shed the lustre of their eloquence on the father's character."*

APPENDIX C.

MATTHIAS CORVINUS.

MATTHIAS CORVINUS was elected and crowned by the grateful Hungarians in reward for his father's services. "His reign was prosperous and long. He aspired to the glory of a conqueror and a saint, but his purest merit is his encouragement of learning," says Gibbon. He had been imprisoned by the preceding king, Ladislaus, but escaped by the help of George Podiebrad, who aimed, and succeeded, in making him his son-in-law. The German Emperor, Frederic III., tried to obtain also the title of King of Hungary; but the people were averse to his character, and to connection with Austria, and chose Matthias instead, 1458. "He reigned above thirty years, with considerable reputation, to which his patronage of learned men, who repaid his munificence with very profuse eulogies, did not a little contribute. Hungary, at least in his time, was undoubtedly formidable to her neighbors, and held a respectable rank, as an independent power, in the republic of Europe." (Hallam's Middle Ages, p. 245.)

There was great joy at the arrival of the young king. He spoke, besides Hungarian, Slavonian, Bulgarian, German, and Latin. He had already been interpreter and secretary to his father. He became an impressive orator and an able general. He reorganized his army, drilling his troops in person. He then turned his attention to the state of education. He founded the University of Buda, which could accommodate more than 40,000 students, and provided a library of more than 50,000 volumes. This library was known by the name of CORVINA.

In 1466, he again defeated the Turks. The Papal Legate then induced him to fight Podiebrad and the Hussites, which he did, but reluctantly. He conquered Bohemia and Moravia. In 1480, he married Beatrice of Naples. Civil contentions, through the machinations of the Pope, now troubled him. He imprisoned Varda, a bishop, and kept him in confinement. The last five years of his life he made Vienna his capital, and died there. (British Cyclopaedia, art. Hungary.)

Rees's Cyclopaedia has the following remarks on Corvini, Matthew, taken from Warton's History of English Poetry, vol. ii., p. 417:

"He was a lover and guardian of literature. He purchased innumerable volumes of Greek and Hebrew writers, at Constantinople and other Grecian cities, when they were sacked by the Turks; and, as the operations of typography were then imperfect, he employed at Florence many learned librarians to multiply copies of the classics, both Greek and Latin, which he could not procure in Greece. These, to the number of 50,000, he placed in a tower which he had erected in the metropolis of Buda; and in this library he established thirty amanuenses, skilled in painting, illuminating, and writing, under the conduct of Felix Ragusinas, a Dalmatian, consummately learned in the Greek, Chaldaic, and Arabic languages, and an elegant designer and painter of ornaments on vellum, attending incessantly to the business of transcription and decoration. The librarian was Bartholomew Fontius, a learned Florentine, the writer of many philosophical works, and professor of Greek and oratory at Florence. When Buda was taken by the Turks, in 1526, Cardinal Boz-wanni offered for the redemption of this inestimable collection 200,000 pieces of the imperial money, but without effect; for the barbarous besiegers destroyed or defaced most of the books in the violence of seizing the splendid covers and the silver bosses and clasps with which they were enriched."

After Matthias's death, the whole of Hungary rapidly degenerated, and was, for a while, merged in Austria.

In the century succeeding the death of Matthias, the Reformation made rapid progress, especially among the higher classes in Hungary. But the Jesuits having been invited in 1604, persecutions began in earnest. But with Matthias II., (1608,) brother of Rudolph, better days came. At his death, in 1619, persecutions were renewed, but Protestants greatly increased in Bohemia about this time. Gabriel Bethlen, of Transylvania, helped the Protestants. He entered into an alliance with the Sultan, with the Protestants of Austria, and with the Bohemians. The Bohemian prince was son-in-law of James I., of England. (British Cyclopædia, art. Hungary.)

Matthias II., of Hungary, 1608-18, seems to have been of no relation to Matthias Corvinus. The only surviving son of the latter, John, after his father's death, retired to private life. Matthias II. left no children.

Several lives of Matthias Corvinus have been written, but none in the English language. The Latin, Hungarian, or German has been employed. The volume of Bonfinius is called Decades IV. Ungaricarum Rerum, or Four Decades of Hungarian Affairs. This is full of anecdotes, and is thought to be too flattering. Gibbon says, "The observations of Spondanus on the life and character of Matthias Corvinus are curious and critical, (A.D. 1464, No. 1; 1475, No. 6; 1476, No. 14-16; 1490, No. 4, 5.) Italian fame was the object of his vanity. His actions are celebrated in the Epitome Rerum Hungaricarum (pp. 322-412) of Peter Ranzanus, a Sicilian. His wise and facetious sayings (De dictis et factis Mathiæ) are registered by Galestus (or Galeotus) Martius of Narni, (528-568,) and we have a particular narrative of his wedding and coronation. These three tracts are all contained in the first volume of Bel's Scriptores Rerum Hungaricarum."

Other works referring to him are, Turotz's Chronica Hungarica, Fessler's Mathias, K  nig von Ungarn, 1793; Korn's ditto, Breslau, 1796, 2 vols.; Wenzel's ditto, 1810. The writer possesses only Korn's memoir.

Nicholas Isvanfi, vice-palatine in the reign of Rudolph, wrote in classical Latinity, The History of Hungary, from the Death of Matthias Corvinus till Matthias II. of Austria.

In 1850, a volume was published in London called, Hungary, its Constitution and Catastrophe, by Corvinus. (A copy in Philadelphia Library, 9591, D. I.)

There appeared in London, 1871, a work in three volumes 16mo, entitled, Corvin, Wiersbitzky, O. J. B., von. A Life Adventure: an Autobiography.

APPENDIX D.

THE REFORMATION IN HUNGARY.*

A CORRUPT form of Christianity was firmly established in Hungary about A.D. 1100. Paulicians soon appeared to uphold the purity of the Gospel. Thousands of Hungarians suffered death for the purity of their faith; yet their numbers continually increased. At length the "Golden Bull," or a charter of rights and liberties, was extorted from the king, and which secured, to a good extent, freedom of religion. Refugees from the surrounding countries therefore swarmed to Hungary. Especially the Hussites, from Bohemia, flocked thither, spreading and strengthening evangelical truth.

* As Matthias Corwin, the American immigrant, came over with the Puritans, religious persecution, no doubt, was one reason of his emigration. (See Introduction.) A short account of the Reformation in Hungary, condensed from a recent volume called The Faith in Hungary, Presbyterian Board Publication, is given.

Rome succeeded in stirring even the famous and learned king, Matthias Corvinus, against them; yet he refused to give the Pope any additional rights within his realm. Matthias appointed his own bishops and abbots, and rather delighted in the satires hurled against the Papal Church by some of his bishops.

Corvinus founded a library at Ofen, or Buda, and established a printing-press very soon after the art was discovered. An Hungarian version of the Bible (made from the Latin, by Ladislaus Bathory, an obscure monk) lay in type, but was not printed; for at this juncture, as before, Hungary became the battle-field between the Turks and Christians.

In no other land did so many forsake, and so rapidly, the Roman Church. The Golden Bull made persecution difficult. Luther's writings were introduced and read everywhere, (A.D. 1530.) Whole villages and towns declared for the Reformation. The converts embraced half the population. But Louis, the king, was only a child of sixteen. The infamous Cardinal Cajetan was sent to be his instructor, and he procured the issue of an edict that heretics should be put to death, and their property confiscated. But another Moslem invasion interfered with the contemplated persecutions, (A.D. 1526.)

For Solymán the Magnificent entered Hungary, and the twenty-six thousand Hungarians who opposed him were as nothing before the Turkish hordes. He marched to Ofen and burned the splendid library which Matthias Corvinus had gathered, containing forty thousand manuscript volumes; for Corvinus had kept thirty secretaries constantly copying books which he borrowed from the universities and princes of other countries. The glory of the kingdom had departed.

The widow of King Louis was a friend of the Reformation. She always carried about with her a Latin Testament, whose margins she herself filled with annotations. Luther wrote to her. She was, however, driven away through the machinations of the priesthood, and she went to live with her brother Charles V. John Henkel, her chaplain, attended her, and expounded the word of God to her. She afterward became regent in Holland, where she assisted the Protestants whenever possible.

The crown of Hungary had been elective since 1301. The royal elections were often scenes of wild confusion. In 1458, when Matthias Corvinus was elected to the throne, he was proclaimed by forty thousand soldiers standing on the frozen Danube, beneath the terraced heights of Buda. In 1505, they resolved that no foreigner should be chosen king of Hungary. After this last Turkish invasion, John Zápolya was elected to the sovereignty by one party; but Ferdinand of Austria was also chosen by the Diet of Presburg. The greatest persecutor should be king. Ferdinand excelled in this crime. The denunciations of heretics were most severe, yet the truth spread and prospered. Many nobles sided with the Reformers. The municipal authorities of Hermannstadt, in Transylvania, banished all monks and nuns from the city. The ever-threatening Turks mitigated the spite of the hierarchy.

Matthew Devay was now the Luther of Hungary, being also Luther's disciple. He was bold and fearless in exposing abuses. Imprisoned by Zápolya, and released by a whim of good nature in the king, he went to the domains of Ferdinand and received the same reward for his fidelity. After two years of prison life at Vienna, he was unaccountably released by the king. The latter had no principles, and seemed, at times, to favor both parties. Devay now went back into Zápolya's dominions. He was joyfully received by nobles and prince s. He was a traveling apostle. He printed his own translation of Paul's Epistles in the Hungarian tongue in 1533. Stephen Szantai was another kindred spirit to Devay. Ferdinand befriended him privately, while publicly he befriended the priests. During a century or more, the Turks held no inconsiderable parts of Hungary, and the sultans favored the heretics. Buda was held by the Turks for more than a hundred years. All through Transylvania and Wallachia heretics abounded. The papal power was shorn of its strength beyond the river Theiss.

In 1541, John Sylvester published a complete Hungarian Testament, and dedicated it to the king's sons. They patronized it from political reasons, as it strengthened the nationality of their people. The Servians of the south received the Bible in their tongue in 1493. The Hungarian Bible was not completed till 1589. Many Hungarians were going continually to Luther and Melancthon to study theology. These noble men often encouraged their remote pupils, after their return, by epistles.

In 1549, Ferdinand sent two royal commissioners to inquire into the religious state of Upper Hungary, and to discover the strength of Protestantism. The pastors, after the first timidity, took courage, and presented the "Five Cities' Confession," as it was called. It was drawn up in so mild a manner that they were not for the present disturbed. The last public act of Melancthon was to ordain a new Hungarian pastor. His pupils always retained a deep love for him.

Ferdinand hoped that the Council of Trent would compromise matters with the reformers and heal the breach. He sent two Hungarian bishops to demand reforms. One of them, Dudith, wrote back to the king that there was no chance of reform in a Roman council; that the pope managed the whole business, through his puppets, for the aggrandizement of the papal see. Dudith soon became a Lutheran. Yet Ferdinand extorted from the pope the right of the laity to the cup, at least in Hungary. But the reformers were not satisfied. They covenanted together (as they did in Scotland) by an oath to support the truth, and signed their names to the document. This document is still preserved in a library at Presburg. When brought to trial, they declared the right of freedom of conscience, and their undaunted demeanor so influenced their judges that they were acquitted. Indeed, during the most of the century (1450-1550) the reformation flourished in Hungary.

In 1564, Ferdinand was succeeded by his son Maximilian. He tried to protect the Protestants by preventing the execution of the fulminations from Rome. He prevented the foisting of Jesuit teachers on towns, against their will. Yet he tried to suppress Zwinglianism. It is doubtful whether he were not really a Protestant at heart. In 1576, his son, Rudolph, succeeded, who was his exact opposite—like Philip II. of Spain.

Congregations, pastors, and even cities and private persons, published their several confessions of faith. This was to let the world know that they were not to be confounded with Socinians and others. Rome also pretended that the reformed were only disobedient children within her fold who needed chastisement. But when the Bishop Conrad demanded his church dues, he received, instead, a confession of their faith. Rudolph began, not open persecution on a large scale, but the harassing of congregations and pastors. There were nearly a thousand Protestant congregations in Hungary.

The approach of Mohammed III., with 150,000 troops, was considered by the reformed a blessing rather than an evil, as again these Moslems diverted the force of persecutors. Ten thousand papal troops, however, sent to help Rudolph, treated the reformed as if they were Turks. They harnessed them as beasts, and made them draw their forage. Protestant pastors were burned with Protestant books as fuel, or flayed alive. They declared their intention to put to the sword every adult who was not a Romanist. A fearful famine followed the war, so that even human flesh was eaten. The king, resigning real power into the hands of papal tools, remained in indolence and debauchery in his palace at Prague.

The free cities, however, were nurseries of liberty, both civil and religious, and only yielded to actual force. From Kashaw the pastors were banished, and the churches handed over to priests. Leutshaw utterly refused to yield, and, force not being at hand, she for the present escaped.

In 1604, the king consented that a law should be forged, and added to the common laws, authorizing persecution, though in violation of his oath to the Hungarian constitution. This placed the lives of his best subjects at the complete disposal of the Romish clergy. He would not allow them even to remonstrate in future. But this act aroused the free blood of Hungary. A vigorous protest was presented, though with little effect. Matthias Botskay, a prince of the best blood, had long revolted against the barbarities of the Romanists. The king also refused him an audience, after a long journey. Returning home, he found the Romanists had committed great depredations on the Protestants, and plundered two of his castles. With his vassals he pursued the Romish forces and defeated them. The cities which had suffered refused to shelter the soldiers of Rome. Another victory was gained over them. A general revolt against the king followed. The Turks helped the good cause. They offered to secure for Botskay the crown. But he refused, saying he was only fighting for freedom of conscience. Peace was concluded, 1606, the king being glad to compromise with Botskay. This was called "The Peace of Vienna." The forged law of persecution was annulled. All decrees against the Protestants were abolished. Freedom of conscience was secured; but with the added clause, "it was not to be interpreted in any way detrimental to the Roman religion"! Public and military appointments were open to all, irrespective of creed. But the pope protested, and his agents went to work. Botskay was poisoned. Oppressions began anew. But Rudolph was deposed. His brother was made king on his signing the articles of freedom. Afterward, Matthias II. had a brief reign of seven years, 1612-19. Bigotry depopulated Germany of at least a million of human beings.

Prince Bethlen Gabor, of Transylvania, was the Cromwell of Hungary. He devoted his life to the cause of religious liberty. With his small province he opposed the imperial might of Ferdinand. Through the help of the Turks he conquered Presburg and gained possession of the crown of Stephen. He also helped the Bohemian Protestants. Then ensued the Thirty Years' War. In 1620, Ferdinand was willing again to guarantee religious freedom, except in Bohemia. He would not desert the cause in that province. It was proposed to make Bethlen King of Hungary. This he refused. Piety was the prevailing current of his life. Four days after the offer, he dissolved the diet. But the diet had decreed perfect equality in faith. Jesuits were banished. But Ferdinand would not agree as to Bohemia. He drove thence 12,000 Christians, (185 nobles,) who scattered to England, Flanders, or Switzerland. Bethlen made war on him. Peace was repeatedly made and broken. Bethlen died in 1629. Ferdinand died in 1637.

In 1633, the church in Hungary was the picture of suffering. Now Prince George Rakotzy, of Transylvania, raised the standard of revolt. He made alliance with Protestant Sweden and with Turkey. New promises were made. Rakotzy died in 1648. His son followed with his father's zeal.

The period 1657-1705 is called the golden age of the Jesuits.

It was during some such scenes that Matthias Corwin is supposed to have emigrated to England, (though probably stopping in Germany,) and to have joined the Puritans there; but whether in the latter part of this period, as above presented, or at an earlier time, is not at present known.

APPENDIX E.

REVS. ANTHONY AND JOHN CORVINUS, OF GERMANY.

(From Herzog's Encyclopædia.)

"CORVINUS, ANTONIUS," (Räbener,) a prominent reformer in the north of Germany, born February 27th, 1501, in Warburg, (not Marburg.) Little is known about his youth or conversion. In 1523, he was driven, on account of his adherence to Lutheranism, from the cloister Loccum, where, as in Riddagshausen, he received his training. From thence he went to Wittenberg, where he prosecuted his studies without coming into personal contact with the principal men of the reformation. In 1526, he was at Marburg, when efforts were made toward founding the new university, but was never professor there. At the recommendation of Amsdorf, a leader of the reformation, in 1528, he was called to Goslar, as preacher at St. Stephen's, where he zealously labored to the close of 1531; when, owing to the unhappy turn of the reformation at Goslar and personal persecutions, he went to Witzenhausen. Here he served the ministry for a number of years, but was frequently at Marburg, and was employed by the landgrave in almost all the important transactions, as at the disputation between Melancthon and Bucer, 1535, and the Smalcald Convention, 1537.

"In 1539, an important field of usefulness opened for him in Göttingen and Kalenberg. At the commencement of the reformation, Duke Erich, the elder, reigned there—a man of an upright disposition, but, as a fellow-soldier of the Emperor Maximilian, rough and severe; without taste for higher interests; averse to the reformation, as the friend of Charles V.; and, through the influence of his first wife, he strove to keep down the movement in his principality. His first wife died without issue. In 1525, he married Elizabeth, daughter of Joachim I., one of the bitterest foes of the reformation. Elizabeth, favorably impressed, perhaps, by the patience of her mother, more so by her brother, the Margrave, John of Küstrin, who visited her in Minden, 1538, when Corvin preached for the first time in Minden, formally passed over to the Evangelical Church in the same year. Erich, who remained in the Romish Church, did not hinder her, and ordered that Corvin, at the request of Elizabeth, and by the permission of Philip of Hesse, should come over, from time to time, to preach and administer the sacraments. From this time Corvin gained in influence. In 1539, he reformed Nordheim, and gave to the city a church government. Immediately after the death of Erich, July 26th, 1540, at the diet of Hagenau, Elizabeth having become regent for Erich II., the introduction of the new doctrine became the chief aim of her life. At her side stood Waldhausen, her chancellor, recommended by Luther; Burcard Mithob, her physician, a friend of Melancthon, allied to Corvin; above all, Corvin himself, who at first remained at Witzenhausen, but in 1541 or 1542 removed to the province and engaged in her service, and was called as superintendent of Kalenberg-Göttingen.

"In the fall of 1540, the estates were consulted in Pattensen concerning the reformation, and consented to receive the word of God. An edict to this effect was published. The ceremonies at first remained unaltered, but the pure Gospel was preached. The change was first to be made internally; this accomplished, the outward soon followed. About Whitsunday, 1542, appeared the form of church government drawn up by Corvin, in German; then, November 4th, monastic rules; also rules for the church revenue. These were to be introduced by a visitation. This was undertaken by Corvin, with the assistance of selected clergy and laity, in Göttingen, 1542; in Kalenberg, 1543.

"Meanwhile, Corvin zealously assisted in carrying on the reformation at Hildesheim, whither he was sent, with Winkel and Bugenhagen, by princes of the Smalkaldian confederacy. He assisted in drawing up the ecclesiastical discipline and introducing the reformation into Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel. Then he returned to his own country, and labored actively in furthering the good work. Although all opposition had not disappeared, yet the whole land seemed to be permanently reformed. Erich II., while engaged in the emperor's camp in fighting the Evangelicals, returned to the Roman Church. Many preachers had to fly. Corvin, with Walther Höcker, was seized, (November 1st, 1549,) in Pattensen, by Spanish soldiers, and taken to Kalenberg. He spent three years in prison. Elizabeth's intercession had no effect. He suffered patiently for the cause of the Gospel, which he had served so zealously. Toward the close of 1552, Erich II., through the influence of the Margrave Albrecht, of Brandenburg-Kulmbach, was regained for the side of the Evangelical party, and Corvin was released from his confinement. But the rigor of the prison consumed his energies. Already sick, he was brought to Hanover, where he died April 5th, 1553. He lies buried before the altar of the Church St. George and James.

"Corvin does not belong to the creative spirits of the reformation, but to the circle of men who assisted in proclaiming the word in its purity. More important than his writings, of which few (except his Postilla) reached several editions, was his talent for church organization. (See Baring, Leben Corvin's, Hannover, 1749. Schlegel, Kirchen und Reformation-geschichte von Nord-deutschland, ii., p. 141, etc.)

"ULHORN.—Santec."

His principal work is the Postilla in Evangelia et Epistolas, or Brief Notes on the Gospels and Epistles. Ulhorn wrote Ein Sendbrief von Antonius Corvinus, mit einer biographischen Einleitung, (Göttingen, 1853,) or A Synodical Letter of Anthony Corvin, with a Biographical Introduction. Baring, as indicated above, wrote Corvin's Life, and Schlegel, in his History of the Churches and Reformation in Northern Germany, has occasion to allude to him. See also a brief notice in McClintock's and Strong's Biblical Cyclopedia.

REV. JOHN CORVINUS.

All that the writer has collected concerning this individual is incorporated in the Introduction.

APPENDIX F.

CORVINUS, JOHN AUGUSTUS. An engraver, born at Leipsic, 1682. He went to reside at Augsburg, where he engraved plates for several considerable works, published in that city; but his style, though neat, is stiff and without taste. He died at Augsburg, in 1738. Among his engravings are several of the plates for a work called, "Representatio Belli ob successuum Regno Hispanico," or, "A Representation of the War of Succession for the Kingdom of Spain;" most of those for the Bible of Scheuchtzer, and a collection of views of churches in Vienna, Strutt, and Heineken. APPENDIX G.*

RIVERHEAD, LONG ISLAND, N. Y., July 11, 1848.

TO REV. JASON CORWIN:

SIR: I am informed you have written to Mrs. Youngs, of this island, making inquiries as to the ancestors of the Corwins, in consequence of information derived from your son, living in New-York City, that an estate in Europe was without heirs, unless they could be found in this country, by the name of Corwin.

There are a great many Corwins upon Long Island and in other parts of this country, whose ancestor was Matthias Corwin, who came from England more than two hundred years ago, and who was among the first settlers of the town of Southold. There is, however, another family of Corwins, whose ancestor was Theophilus Corwin, who came to this country over one hundred years ago. He appears to have come from the continent of Europe, and I am taking pains to ascertain all the particulars in relation to him.

I would thank you to write to me on the receipt of this letter, and state the name of your son in the city of New-York, that you mentioned in your letter to Mrs. Youngs, as having given you information in relation to the property in Europe.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEORGE MILLER.

MR. JASON CORWIN :

NARROWSBURG, Sept. 8, 1848.

SIR : You will please pardon me the liberty I have taken in addressing these few lines to you, and the favor I ask of you. I am a son-in-law of Mr. Phineas Corwin, and he wishes me to ascertain the pedigree of the family on Long Island. I have been informed that you have a pedigree of the family, for a long time back. He wishes to know who the first Corwin was, and whom he married, for these reasons : It appears that there was once a Matthew Corwin, who lived in Hungary, and his eldest son emigrated to this country, and settled on Long Island. But soon after he left, his father died, and left a large estate, amounting to forty millions. It remained unclaimed for fifty years, when it went into the hands of the government. You will therefore do me a great favor in giving me what information you can in relation to the matter. My wife's father was born on Long Island, and he has a brother of the name of Jason, and their father's name was Matthew Corwin. The Corwin that this estate belongs to married a Morton. Your early attention to the above will be thankfully received.

Respectfully yours,

DANIEL W. GILLETT.

(This letter (it is here condensed) was mis sent, and fell into the hands of Elisha Corwin, of New-York City, by whom it was answered.)

MR. CORWIN :

SIR : By request of Mrs. Youngs, I write to inform you that our Long Island friends have ascertained that Matthias Corwin emigrated from Warwick, England, to Long Island; also that letters have been found written in Hungary, one hundred and fifty years ago, addressed to Theophilus Corwin, their brother. In examining my father's papers, I find a deed, which my great-grandfather, Theophilus Corwin received in 1699. Our Long Island friends have written to Austria on the subject. If you have received any intelligence since I saw you, you will confer a favor by informing me.

Yours respectfully,

IRENA HUSTED.

ARCADIA, Oct. 16, 1848.

It will be observed that these rumors, and this excitement in portions of the family, about this Hungarian property, took place at the time that Kossuth visited this country, namely, in 1848. What foundation there was for this excitement, the writer can not positively say. He was, however, informed several years since by one of the family that Kossuth alluded in some of his speeches to the emigration of some of the descendants of Matthias Corvinus to America. That there were two distinct families on Long Island, descended, the one from Matthias, and the other from Theophilus, is no doubt an error, as the will of Matthias refers to a son Theophilus, and no documentary proof of a separate family descended from a Theophilus has been met with, in the preparation of this work.

APPENDIX H.

THE ENGLISH CULWENS, OR CURWENS.

Si je n'estoy.

HUTCHINSON'S History of the County of Cumberland, England, and Camden's Britannia, are the sources of the information concerning this family. They state that John de Talbois, (who was brother of Fulk, Earl of Anjou, and King of Jerusalem, (in the crusades,) married Elgiva, daughter of the Saxon King, Ethelred, who reigned A.D. 866-871. John de Talbois was the first lord of the barony of Kendall, to which position his son Elred or Ethelred succeeded. Elred's son, Ketel, granted the church of Morland to the abbey of St. Mary, York, to which grant Christiana, his wife, was a witness. Ketel's eldest son was Gilbert, father of William de Lancaster, (who had a son of the same name,) from whom descended in a direct line the de Lancasters, barons of Kendall. Ketel's second son was William, and the third, Ormus or Orm. The latter married Gumilda, daughter of Gospatric, Earl of Dunbar and Northumberland. (Camden's Brit. iii. 423.) She was also sister of Waldieve, first lord of Allerdale.

Now, William the Conqueror had infeoffed Ranulphus de Meschines with the county of Cumberland, and Ranulphus infeoffed Waldieve in the barony of Allerdale. William, a brother of Ranulph, whom the king had made lord of Coupland, also infeoffed Waldieve, in the land between Cocar and Darwent, and in the townships of Brigham, Elysfield, Dene, Braintwhaite, Grisother, the two Cliftons, and Staneburne. Ranulph also inherited the earldom of Chester, by the death of his brother Galfridus, on which he surrendered Cumberland back to the king, on condition that his tenants in fee should hold their land of the king in capite.

Waldieve now infeoffed Orm, when he married his sister Gumilda, in the manor of Seaton below Darwent, parcel of the barony of Allerdale, as also the towns of Camberton, Crayksothen, and Flemingby; and thereupon Orm was settled at Seaton. (Camden's Brit. iii. 9.)

The walls and ruins of the mansion-house of Seaton, Mr. Denton states to have been visible yet in his time.

Orm was succeeded by his second son, Gospatric, (named after his maternal grandfather,) to whom Allan, son of Waldieve, second lord of Allerdale, and his consin-german, gave High Ireby, which remained vested in a younger branch of the Curwens, and which terminated in female heirs. This Gospatric was the first of the family, who was lord of WORKINGTON, having exchanged with his cousin, William de Lancaster, the lordship of Middleton, in Westmoreland, for the lands of Lamplugh and Workington. In this bargain, de Lancaster retained for himself and heirs an annual rent charge of sixpence, to be paid at the fair of Carlisle, or a pair of gilt spurs, binding Gospatric and his heirs to homage, and to discharge his foreign service, as of the castle and barony of Egremont.

Gospatric gave two parts of the fishery in Derwent to the abbey of Holm Cultram, except Wayteroft, which he gave to the priory of Carlisle; which was granted over by the priory to Thomas, son of Gospatric, upon a reserved rent of 7s.

Thomas was called, after the fashion of the times, "son of Gospatric." To him one Rowland, son of Ughtred, son of Fergus, gave the lordship of Culwen, in Galloway. Thomas confirmed the grant of Flemingby made by his father to the convent of Holm Cultram, and gave to that house the whole fishing of Derwent. His eldest son, Thomas, died before his father; and Allan, his third son, acquired by gift from Patric the lands of Camerton, taking that surname, from whom descended the Camertons. Thomas, son of Gospatric, gave Lamplugh to Robert de Lamplugh, and his heirs, to be holden by yearly presentment of a pair of gilt spurs. To his second son, Patric, he had given, while his eldest son was yet living, the lordship of Culwen in Galloway, and Patric, marrying the heiress of Culwen, (Camden, iii. 423,) assumed the surname, and was thenceforward known as Patric de Culwen,* (about 1140-50.) [Culwen is in the county of Kirkcudbright, on the south-west coast of Scotland.]

But Patric's elder brother, Thomas, dying without male heirs, Patric succeeded to the entire estate, and removed to Workington. His eldest son Thomas left no children, and the estate again passed to the line of the second son, Gilbert. Gilbert was returned to Parliament by the county of Cumberland in 1373, 1374, and 1376. Sir Christopher also represented the county in several Parliaments. He was also sheriff in 1423 and 1427, under the name of Culwen, and in 1433 under the name of CURWEN, to which cognomen the family have ever since adhered.

"The family of Curwens settled here (Workington) is of great ancestry. The name is local, derived from Culwen, and by a corruption, which first appeared in the public records in the reign of King Henry VI., the family name was changed to Curwen, one of them being returned in the sixth year of that king's reign, as sheriff of the county, by that name." (Hutchinson's Cumberland, ii. p. 143.)

In 1542, by an inquisition of knight's fees in Cumberland, it was found that Sir Thomas held the manor of Workington of the king, by knight's service, as of his castle of Egremont, by the service of one knight's fee, 45s. 3d., cornage, 4s. seawake, and pnture of two sergeants. He also held the manor of Thornthwaite, one third of the manor of Bothill, the manors of Seaton and Camberton, divers tenements in Gilcrouse, Great Broughton, and Dereham. Sir Henry had the honor of affording an asylum to Mary Queen of Scots, when that unhappy princess sought the protection of England. She landed near the mouth of the Derwent in 1568, after her escape from the castle of Dunbar. Taking refuge at the Curwen house, she was hospitably entertained till the pleasure of Elizabeth was known, when she was removed first to Cockermouth castle, and then to Carlisle. The chamber in which she slept is still called the Queen's chamber. (Camden, iii. 437.) Sir Henry represented Cumberland in parliament in 1552 and 1558. Sir Nicholas, his son, was sent to parliament in 1631. Sir Henry's son, Patric, was made a baronet in 1626; but dying without heirs, the title became extinct, and the estate passed to his half-brother, Eldred, who dying in a year, was succeeded by his son, Sir Henry, with whom that branch of the family expired. The estate now passed over to Elred, of the younger branch descended from Sir Henry Curwen and Jane Crosby. He was sheriff in 1729. He also represented Cockermouth in parliament. His son and successor, Sir Henry, represented Carlisle in parliament in 1762, and stood for the county of Cumberland, at the general election in 1768, and, after an unprecedented contest, was victorious by a considerable majority. He left an only daughter, Isabella, heiress of his estate, who was married very young to her paternal first cousin, John Christian, Esq., of Unerigg Hall. The family tablet of the Christians is given in Hutchinson's Cumberland, vol. ii. p. 146-8. The record extends back to 1422. John Christian of Milntown, Unerigg and Workington, Esq., was baptized July 13th, 1756. He was M.P. for the city of Carlisle in two parliaments. He assumed the surname and arms of the Curwens, by virtue of the king's sign-manual, dated March 1st, 1790. Isabella was born October 2d, 1765, and was married at Edinburgh, October 5th, 1782.

It was remarkable of this lady that she was the last and only living child of a great number, her mother having had fifteen children, all either still-born, or who died in a few moments after birth. John Christian, (Curwen,) Esq., had previously been married to Miss Jaubman, of the Isle of Man, who left at her death an only son, John Christian, Esq., of Unerigg Hall, one of the dempsters of the island. By the heiress of the Curwens, he left five sons and two daughters. Henry, born December 5th, 1783, was heir of his mother; William entered the ministry, and became rector of Harrington in Cumberland; Edward, of Bell Grange; John in the ministry, rector of Harrington; Bridget married Charles Walker, Esq., in Ashford court, county of Saluph; Christiana, and Francis, of Upington, in Shroepshire.

Sir Henry was sheriff in 1784. In 1786, he was returned to parliament. He became knight of that shire, for Cumberland, and so remained till his death. Mr. Curwen was succeeded in his own estate (on the Isle of Man) by his eldest son, John Christian, and in those of the Curwens, by his second son, Henry, as above said, who died December 9th, 1828. Henry's son, Edward Stanley Curwen, is now possessor of the estate. Of the sons of the latter, Rev. Alfred F. Curwen is now rector of Harrington; Charles H. Curwen is now in the United States. (See Introduction.) The eldest son's name the writer has not learned.*

"The Curwen family is a very ancient and respectable one. Their principal residence has long been at Workington Hall, in the county of Cumberland, where they had large possessions in landed property and coal mines. The last gentleman of that name and family was Henry Curwen, Esq., late member of the county. It was chiefly by his interest that Sir James Lowther, late Earl of Lonsdale, lost his parliamentary influence in the famous contested election for Cumberland, in the year 1768, when Henry Fletcher, Esq., now a baronet, first obtained a seat in the House of Commons, with Mr. Curwen, who sat in the preceding parliament for the city of Carlisle." . . . "The mansion-house is a large quadrangular building, which still bears marks of great antiquity, (1152,) notwithstanding various alterations and improvements which have been made during the last thirty years. The walls were so remarkably thick that they were able a few years since, in making some improvements, to excavate a passage, sufficiently wide, lengthways, through one of the walls, leaving a proper thickness on each side of the passage to answer every purpose of strength." . . . (Camden's Britannia, iii. 437.)

"The manor house of the family of Curwens, called Workington Hall, stands upon a fine eminence on the banks of the river Derwent. It is an elegant mansion,

* In 1870, the writer wrote to England, directing his letter to "The Representative of the Curwen Family at Workington." The letter was handed to the Rev. Alfred F. Curwen, who kindly answered it, suggesting a probable origin of the Salem Curwens. He said that the church records were much injured in the time of the Commonwealth, but that he would have them searched; but probably nothing was found, as the writer has received no further communication on this subject. Two interesting letters, however, have been received from Mrs. Edward Stanley Curwen, in the mean time, who also kindly sent a photographic carte of Workington Hall, a lithograph of which is presented in this volume.

surrounded by excellent lands. The house commands a prospect of the town, the river, and its northern banks, and the western ocean for a considerable tract. Here is a park, with beautiful cattle." (Hutchinson's Cumberland, ii. 142.)

"The river Derwent, in one unbroken stream, throws itself into the ocean at Wirkington, famous for a salmon fishery. It is now the seat of the ancient knightly family of the Curwens, who derived their descent from Gospatric, Earl of Northumberland, and took their surname by agreement from Culwen, a family of Galloway, whose heir they married. They have here a noble mansion, like a castle, and from them, if I may be allowed to mention it, without the imputation of vanity, I derive my descent from my mother's side." (Camden's Britannia, iii. 423. Quoted, also, in Hutchinson's Cumberland, ii. 137.)

"Also on the west syde of Darwent is a prety ereke, where as shyppes cum to, wher ys a lytle prety fysshier toun, cawled Wyrkenton, and ther is the chefe howse of Sir Thomas Curwyn." (Lel. vii. 71.)

"Of this family was Hugh Curwen, Archbishop of Dublin, who having sat twelve years, (and in the mean time having been constituted one of the Lords Justices of Ireland,) old age growing heavy upon him, he took care to be translated to Oxford, and lingering one year in that see, he died at Sumbroch, near Bruford, and was there buried in the parish church, November 1st, 1568. He was made Bishop of Oxford in 1567.

"Curran, the celebrated Irish advocate, was born at Newmarket, in the county of Cork, Ireland, July 24th, 1750, and died at Amelia Place, Brompton, October 14th, 1817. He was for several years a member of parliament, but was far more successful in the forum than in the senate. It is said that his family originally bore the name of Curwen, and that his paternal ancestors came over to Ireland from the north of England with one of Cromwell's leaders." APPENDIX I.

WORKINGTON, Cumberland co., England, is a market-town and sea-port, situated on the left bank of the river Derwent, about a mile from its entrance to the sea, in St. George's Channel. The population in 1851 was 5837. The living is a rectory in the Archdeaconry of Richmond and Diocese of Chester. Workington is indebted for its prosperity chiefly to the collieries in its neighborhood, which furnish the principal article of export. Timber and flax are imported to a considerable extent. Ship-building, rope and sail-making, and block-making, employ some of the inhabitants. A straw plait, in imitation of leghorn, is made here. There are also extensive iron foundries, hat-works, breweries, malt-kilns, dye-works, chemical works, temper-yards, nail-works, and flour-mills. The river Deryvent is here crossed on a stone bridge of three arches, built in 1763. Workington possesses a safe and capacious harbor, with a breakwater and extensive quays. The custom-house and commodious warehouses are situated on the quays. The number of vessels registered belonging to this port in 1854 was 3 under 50 tons and 92 over 50 tons, with 1 steam vessel of 18 tons.

St. Michael's, the parish church, was rebuilt about 1780, in semi-gothic style. St. John's Chapel, erected in 1825, is of the Tuscan order of architecture. The Wesleyan Methodists, Independents, English Presbyterians, and Roman Catholics also have church edifices here. There are also national, British, infant, and Roman Catholic schools, a school of industry for girls, and a savings-bank, a mechanics' institute, a subscription library and news-room, a theatre, assembly-rooms, and a dispensary. A lock-up and justice's rooms have been recently built. The principal market for corn and provision is held on Wednesday, and a less important market on Saturday. Fairs, held in May and October, have lately been revived. Races are held annually. From Workington there is a branch railroad to Cockermouth.

APPENDIX J.

PHILIP CORWINE.

THE Conversion of Philip Corwine, a Franciscan Fryar, to the Reformation of the Protestant Religion, anno 1589, formerly written by John Garvey, sometime Primate of all Ireland, being a copy of the Original, remaining amongst James Usher, late Primate of the same, his papers; and now entred amongst Sir James Ware's Manuscripts. Published for the good of the Protestant Church of England by R. W., Gent, Dublin. Printed by Jos. Ray, at Colledge Green, for a Society of Stationers. 1681.

To the Reader. Zeal, the mother of all Religions, caused the devout (and otherwise honorable) women to persecute St. Paul: the same stirred up St. Paul to persecute Christ, before he had knowledge of him. Thus was the Zeal of this Convert, which a Reverend Father of the Protestant Church wrote to be preserved for future memory.

This narrative I shall lay before Protestant and Papist upon two accounts: First, That all men may behold the Danger of immoderate Zeal against those of another Judgment. Secondly, To show how that Zeal and Knowledge ought to walk together.

1. Immoderate Zeal, saith Nazianzen, was in his time the cause of great Broyles and Troubles; insomuch that Truth it self hath been stretched too far; so that by a vehement dislike of Errour on one side, men have run into errour on the other, as Dionysius and Alexandrins did, being too fervent against Sabellius; for these two first laid the ground of Arrianisme.

2. Zeal without Knowledge may well be compared to Phaeton in the Poet, who took upon him to drive the Chariot of the Sun, but yet through his inconsiderate Rashness set the world in a flame. St. Bernard hits full on this point in these words: Discretion without Zeal is slow-paced, and Zeal without Discretion is strong-headed: let therefore Zeal spur on Discretion, and Discretion reign in Zeal.

Thus the zeal of this Convert, having joyned with the knowledge of the holy Scriptures, became a lively Faith in Christ, not choosing Saint or Angel to plead his Cause, but the best of Advocates, Christ Jesus, who is the only Mediator between God and Man.

R. WARE.

The Conversion of Philip Corwine, a Franciscan Fryer, to the Reformation of the Protestant Religion, anno 1589.

Philip Corwine, Nephew unto Hugh Corwine, late Archbishop of Dublin, supposing our Predecessor John Long, late Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of all Ireland, had been then living, wrote this Epistle following; which came to my hands, thinking it had been to me directed, my name being John, and his Successor, within a little time after the Expiration of our said Predecessor, I opened it.

After my long and tedious travels, wandering like a Jew finding no settlement, (ever since the Reformation of the Church of England revived, and was appointed to be observed by our Gracious Sovereign the Queen and Her High Court of Parliament,) I departed from Ireland into England, from thence into Spain, and so into Italy; being ambitious to visit Rome, purposely to behold her Modes and Forms: but being not satisfied with the Passages and cruel Objects which I there beheld, I returned into Spain, and took up my lodging in St. Francis his Monastery in the City of Sevill, where I have hitherto remained, expecting your Gracious acceptance, and encouraging of a Prodigal Son to come home to the church of Christ. For were it no other then the Tyranny of the Romish Church, and the large indulgences which she hath sent abroad into most Nations, for to massacre those whom she esteems Heretical, purposely to advance her coffers, and to raise up her luxurious appetite, it would be for a rational man a sufficient president to lay before him what an Idol, or rather what a devouring Dragon, he and his ancestors have hitherto worshipped.

I acknowledge I have feared this monster beyond my Creator or Redeemer, and depended on his sinful Indulgences more than on the better Passions of my Saviour Jesus, for which I only crave mercy from above, whose Power is most infinite.

Also I have from my youth upward wandred in the paths of Idolatry, worshipping of Stocks and Stones framed into human shapes by the art of man, whose eyes behold neither my bowing or my kneeling, whose ears heard not my petitions, nor their mouths able to return me an answer: therefore I can not but lament, both for the precious time which I have lost, and for the happiness of which I have all this time been bereaved; all thus justly happening unto me through my perverseness in not embracing those comfortable offertures which my Gracious deceased Uncle, Hugh, late Archbishop of Dublin, proposed unto me, in case I had adhered unto the Protestant faith, as it is now, according to the Apostolick manner, established.

Yet knowing your Fatherly Clemency and pious Inclinations, by your former correspondence with my deceased Uncle, I shall returne with the Prodigal Son, and come over, if I may be so happy to receive your encouragement, and so end the residue of my days to God's Glory and mine own Salvation.

Sevill, March 29, 1589.

Your trusty and obedient Servant,

To the Reverend Father in God

PHILIP CORWINE.

John, Archbishop of Armagh.

Upon the receipt of this epistle,* rejoicing to embrace especially the reformation of so understanding a man as this convert was, I returned an answer. Yet beforehand, I showed this, his epistle, unto our judicious and most learned brother in Christ, Adam, now Archbishop of Dublin and Chancellor of Ireland, with whom I consulted, and then we gave him all the encouragement imaginable, and sent him this answer following, by a Portuguese merchant, then going from Dublin to Waterford, and from thence being bound for Spain:

* The above was copied verbatim et literatim, and I intended thus to copy the whole pamphlet, which I found in the Public Library of Philadelphia; but my time falling short, and being unable quickly to find any one to do the work for me, I was obliged to copy the rest rapidly in phonography, even sometimes giving only an abstract.—E. T. C.

TO MR. PHILIP CORWINE, IN ST. FRANCIS HIS CONVENT, AT SEVILLE.

MR. CORWINE: Your epistle is welcome, though not coming to the hands of that Rev. Father in God, John, our predecessor, who lately departed this life to obtain an everlasting one in the kingdom of heaven. Although he was deprived of this happy offerture of yours, (by his death,) yet was it as acceptable to me, his successor, who, with the rest of our brethren in Christ, do rejoice at your recantation, (in a manner,) as the angels and saints of heaven do at the repentance of a sinner, which causeth his soul to enter therein. Whatever you expected from our predecessor shall be granted by his successor, your humble servant, who embraces any one who desires to become a member of Christ and one of his flock. My weak endeavors shall not be wanting, neither shall the ability of our church here be slack, to assist you accordingly. I and our brother, Adam, now Archbishop of Dublin and Chancellor of this kingdom, have unanimously embraced your learned epistle, and in token thereof have sent you this small testimony of our affection toward your journey expenses. Therefore, let this be unto you an assurance of your kind reception by us, the clergy here, and for the future brotherly love and correspondence between you and us, your brethren and clergy of this nation.

DUBLIN, June 27th, 1589.

Your true and loving friend,

JOHN ARMACHANUS.

Upon the receipt hereof, this Philip, beholding the clergy's invitation together with the sum (being 50 pounds, English) which Adam, my brother aforesaid, and myself had sent him for his supply in his journey, upon the first convenience, . . . toward Ireland, first coming into the Netherlands, where, meeting with a vessel bound for Waterford, he there landed, being civilly entertained by our brother, Thomas Whitherhead, the then Bishop of that diocese. He landed on October 22d following, after the date of this our epistle, where this Philip tarried for some certain days, discoursing with the Bishop wherefore he came over hither; as also showing him our encouragement, our brother encouraged him (sending a guide along with him) to Drogheda. Of which I, having noticed, sent word to the mayor and corporation to receive him kindly, which was accordingly performed.

Some few days after this his kind reception at Drogheda, this Philip Corwine being minded to make an open manifestation of his true and hearty conversion, desired me to give notice beforehand to the town and corporation that he intended (God willing) to make a recanting speech, and to declare therein the reasons why he fell from the Church of Rome, and the causes of his adherence to the Protestant faith. Which speech was declared in St. Peter's Church, where he chose this following text for his discourse:

Acts 9: 4, 5: "And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? And he said, Who art Thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest. It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks."

He then compares himself to Saul. He left England, on the accession of Elizabeth, to go to Rome, desiring to find ways to persecute the Church of England. His uncle, Hugh, offered him excellent inducements if he would stay, but he would not. As he traveled through southern Europe, he compared the low condition of the people with those of England. He also could not help contrasting the wickedness of the popes with the purity of Christ. While in Rome, eight persons were condemned to death for saying that Christ was their only mediator. Their resolution and faith pinched his conscience, and he wondered how Rome could be so cruel. He tried to divert himself by reading the Bible, and opened by the passage, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" Again, at another time, with similar purpose, he opened by Psalm 94, "O God, the Avenger, show Thyself clearly." He heard the voice of the murdered crying for vengeance. He thought that by belonging to the Church of Rome he was guilty of her cruelties. At last, hoping to change the current of his thoughts, he left Rome, going to Seville. Here he heard in the streets the cries of heretics, as they were arrested. The Spanish inquisition was just as bad as the Roman. A poor man (Leopold Dinsever) said that he thought the inquisition made more heretics than it did Romanists. He was imprisoned, and his goods confiscated. He ventured to rebuke these persecutors, and was silenced by the retort, "We believe you will be such another." Further reflection made him still more dissatisfied with Rome. Opening the Scriptures again, at Ezekiel 18: 27—"Again, when the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive"—his heart was changed, his reason and understanding were changed. He fell into a passion of weeping. Two coming up to him at the time, asked him why he wept. He answered, For the multitude of his sins. He concealed his conversion for a time, and then he wrote the letter above. He confessed the goodness of God to him in opening his eyes, and his heart was filled with gratitude.

The author of this pamphlet continues: I entertained this Mr. Corwine for ten months as one of my chaplains; but he suddenly died of a flux, which took him on September 3d, 1590, having received the Lord's Supper, and continuing faithful to the end.

His conversion was delightful, and he said the following things about the late Council of Trent:

1. That the Council had in their litany, that on certain days all heretical kings should be cursed, among whom was named the Queen of England and all her obedient subjects.

2. That Her Majesty's dominions are to be given to any prince conquering them, especially to Spain, since the King of Spain had married the Queen's sister. But Ireland should be independent, because of her fidelity.

3. That every Roman Catholic in England, of any quality or estate, having two or more sons, should train them up in either of these callings, being most convenient for the aid of Rome—viz., lawyers, physicians, clerks, vintners, inn-keepers, apothecaries, grocers, brewers, victuallers.

4. That all deeds held by Roman Catholics, or other ecclesiastical lands, be reposed privately under the signet of Rome, the party enjoying the same until the Catholic faith be restored. Then, such deeds appearing on record, the possessor, if a Catholic, to be imburied out of heretics' estates.

5. That all oaths on the Protestant Bible are null.

6. That no Catholic marry any heretic, unless it will be a great advancement to the Catholic, and then only under promise to a confessor to advance only the Roman faith.

7. That dispensations be granted to the wife, and to learned Catholics, for oaths, that they may hold place or office. But he shall confess three or four times a year that he is in heart a Romanist.

8. That they shall give all proper information to the Court of Rome.

9. That excommunication or a perpetual curse shall light on the families that will not assist, in every way, Mary, Queen of Scots, to the throne of England.

10. That the Roman Catholics be obedient to the bishops or priests set over them, paying them taxes, etc.

11. That they try and induce Elizabeth to marry a Catholic, or secure, in some way, a Romish prince for England.

Thus spake Philip Corwine, before his death, about what the Council of Trent had done, and he was the cause of the conversion of the Mayor of Drogheda, his wife, and several others. But his sudden death was thought to be the effect of poison.*

APPENDIX K.

NICASIVS DE SILLÉ.

NICASIVS DE SILLÉ, or Sillé, who was first counselor in the administration of Governor Stuyvesant of the affairs of New-Netherlands, was a man of considerable attainments in literature and science. He was probably a descendant of a person of the same name who filled several important positions under the government of the United Provinces of Holland, as well as of the municipality of Amsterdam, in the latter part of the sixteenth century. The identity of their names is, however, all the evidence in our possession to justify the opinion in favor of this relationship, unless, indeed, his title of "Well-born," renders the supposition more probable. The elder de Sillé was a native of Malines or Mechlin, in the Belgian provinces, which he abandoned on account of religious persecution, at the time when Balthazar de Moncheron, Peter Plancius, and other of his countrymen, for the same reason, fled to Holland, where they became doubly entitled to the rights and considerations of citizens of the Dutch Republic by reason of the part they took in the struggle of their adopted country for independence of the imperial power of Spain.

The American NicasiuS de Sillé was a native of Arnheim, and came to New-Netherlands in the summer of 1653, bringing with him a commission from the West-India Company as first counselor of the colonial government. In this commission he is declared to be an able and experienced statesman and soldier, and is instructed to reside at Fort Amsterdam, to deliberate with the governor on all questions of war, police, or public affairs; to promote alliances of amity and commerce; to assist in the administration of justice, both civil and criminal, and to advise generally on all matters which might transpire in the colony. He appears to have enjoyed the confidence of the governor, whom he accompanied in his expedition to the Delaware against the Swedes. He succeeded Van Zenhoven, in 1656, as attorney-general. He was at the same time appointed Sheriff of New-Amsterdam. In this office it was his duty, among other important labors, to make nightly tours around the town. It marks the simplicity of the times to read his complaints on one occasion to the burgomasters and schepens of the city, of the dogs making dangerous attacks on him while performing that service, of the hallooing of the Indians in the streets, and the boys playing hoecje, that is, hide and seek, around the hooks or corners of the streets, to the prejudice of quiet and good order.

He became one of the proprietors of New-Utrecht, on Long Island, where, in 1657, he built the first house erected in that town. It was standing until within a few years past. It was inclosed by high palisades, to protect it from attacks by the Indians. He resided there in 1659, in 1674, and probably until his death, which is unknown as to time and place.

He began the records of the town of New-Utrecht, which are not only in his handwriting, but evince, in different respects, his literary acquirements. It is to these writings that we are indebted for the few specimens of his verse which make him one of the earliest poets of New-Netherlands.

De Sillé's closing days were clouded by domestic troubles, and he seems to have needed all the consolations of that religion which breathes throughout his poetry. He left three children, all by his first wife. A son, Lawrence, from whom are descended many bearing his name, now generally abbreviated into Sill; and two daughters, Gerdientje, who married Gerritse Van Cowenhoven, of Brooklyn, and Anna, who became the wife of Hendrik Kip, of New-Amsterdam.

(From Murphy's Anthology of New-Amsterdam, which also gives a woodcut of de Sillé's house at New-Utrecht, and specimens of his poetry.)

KIP FAMILY. (See p. 49.)

[From Holgate's American Genealogies.*]

AMONG the members of the Association entitled "The Company of Foreign Companies," as having been organized in 1588 for the purpose of exploring a north-east passage to the Indies, around the coast of Asia, was an individual named Hendrick Kype, ancestor of a highly respectable family in the State of New-York. He left Amsterdam with his family and came to New-Netherlands in 1635. Returning to Holland, however, soon after, he died there. His sons, remaining in this country, seem to have had considerable enterprise; for we find them securing large tracts of land and holding prominent stations in the government of the colony, as far down as the time of its conquest by the English in 1664. In 1647-49, when Governor Stuyvesant, to remodel the government, organized a popular assembly, composed of nine men, chosen from among the people, who should coöperate with him and his counsel in the administration of the government, Hendrick Kip, one of these sons, was among those selected for the purpose. Jacobus (James) Kip, another son, was secretary to the Council of New-Netherlands, and obtained a grant of land on the island of Manhattan, about two miles above the City Hall, on what was afterward called Kip's Bay. Here, in 1641, he erected a house of bricks, imported from Holland, a part of which was afterward rebuilt in 1670 and 1696. Five generations of the family were born here. A few years since, on the opening of Thirty-fifth street, on the line of which it stood, the house, at that time the oldest on the island, was taken down. In the following generation, we find the family purchasing from the Esopus Indians, on the east side of the Hudson, where Rhinebeck now stands, a tract of land extending four miles along the river and several miles inland. The original deed, which is still preserved, is dated July 28th, 1686, and signed by three Indian chiefs, Ankony, Anamaton, and Callicoon. Two years after, a royal patent dated June 2d, 1688, was granted by His Excellency Thomas Dongan, Governor of the province of New-York, under the name of the Manor of Kipsburgh, in confirmation of the Indian title. One fifth part of this manor was afterward sold to Colonel Henry Beekman, through whose granddaughter, the mother of Chancellor Livingston, it passed into the Livingston family. About three hundred acres of this property are still held by the Kip family, under the original deed. It seems that, while a part of the family adhered to the British cause during the Revolution, Jacobus Kip, of Kip's Bay, was a staunch Whig, his son having joined the American army. His residence for a short time was Washington's head-quarters. It will be recollected that on Sunday, September 15th, 1776, the British, under Sir William Howe, landed at Kip's Bay, and, after a skirmish with the Americans in the rear of Mr. Kip's house, they took possession of it, and, for several years, it was occupied by British officers as their head-quarters.

Jacob Kip, of Kipsburg, became a captain in the British infantry; and of another member of the family, we find the following account in Bolton's History of Westchester County, vol. ii. p. 254:

"The command of the loyalist rangers afforded Colonel de Lancey facilities for communicating with his old associates in this section of the country, and was the means for inducing some of the landed gentry to take an active part in the contest. This was particularly the case with Samuel Kip, Esq., of a family which, from the first settlement by the Dutch, had possessed a grant of land at Kip's Bay, and in other parts of New-York island. Having been always associated with the government, and from their landed interests wielding an influence in its affairs, they were naturally predisposed to espouse the royal cause. In addition to this, Mr. Kip's estate was near to that of Colonel de Lancey, and a close intimacy had always existed between them. He was therefore easily induced to accept a captain's commission from the royal government, and embarked all his interests in this contest. He raised a company of cavalry, principally from his own tenants, joined the British army with the colonel, and from his intimate knowledge of the country was enabled to gain the reputation of an active and daring partisan officer. For this reason he was for a time assigned to a command in the loyalist rangers. In one of the severe skirmishes which took place in Westchester County, in 1781, Captain Kip, while charging a body of American troops, had his horse killed under him, and received a severe bayonet wound. He survived, however, several years after the war, though, like his friend de Lancey, a heavy pecuniary sufferer from the cause he had espoused."

* See also Lossing's Field Book of Revolution, ii. 597, for similar remarks and a woodcut of the Kip house; Duyckinck's Cyc. of Am. Lit., ii. 351, and Hist. Notes of the Kip Family, (by Bishop Kip.) Published by Munsell. Albany. 1871.

The following is a list of the municipal offices the family have held in the city of New-York, under the different forms of government, during the last two hundred years, taken from the corporation records:

Schepens, (or justices,) Hendrik Kip, 1656; Jacobus Kip, 1659, 1662, 1663, 1665, 1673, 1674. Common Councilman, Johannes Kip, 1694. Aldermen, Johannes Kip, 1655, 1687, 1691-93, 1696, 1697; Jacobus Kip, 1709-28; Leonard Kip, 1820, 1821. Assistant Aldermen, Samuel Kip, 1729-31; Samuel Kip, 1807, 1808; Leonard Kip, 1817-19.

Most, if not all, of the Kips' baptisms and marriages, of the parties who remained in New-York City, are recorded in the records of the Dutch Church, and are copied in Valentine's Manual of the Common Council, New-York City.

The author has considerable material relating to the descendants of Hendrik Kip, (brother of Isaac and James,) of New-Amsterdam, N. Y., as has also Henry Kipp, now of Hackensack, N. J. The records of the various Dutch churches in Bergen and Passaic counties, N. J., such as Hackensack, Passaic, Schraalenberg, Paramus, etc., contain much material also relating to the Kipps, though often in a perishing condition.

PREAKNESS, N. J.

The tract of country now called Preakness (N. J.) was originally obtained by letters patent from the crown of Great Britain. The first, perhaps, who possessed any special claim over that region was Thomas Hart, of Enfield, in the county of Middlesex, (England,) who was a merchant and proprietor of several tracts of land in New-York and East New-Jersey. By will dated December 19th, 1704, he bequeathed two third parts of said lands to his sister Patiente Ashfield, and one third part to Mercy Benthall, wife of Walter Benthall, all of London. His sister, Patiente Ashfield, was made by said will sole executrix of said lands. These lands were inherited by Priscilla and Mercy Benthall, daughters of Walter and Mercy Benthall, and by Richard Ashfield, grandson of said Patiente Ashfield. Priscilla and Mercy Benthall, by will, dated July 20th, 1721, appointed Rip Van Dam, Sr., and Rip Van Dam, Jr., attorneys of New-York, to dispose of their real estate and its appurtenances in New-Jersey, which had been bequeathed them by the will of Thomas Hart. These attorneys sold it to GEORGES DU REMOS and CORNELIUS KIP, December 4th, 1723, for £270, current money of New-York. The descendants of these two persons have held parts of this section until the present day. The name of the district is in the deed spelled Perekenos. The tract of land sold was thus described:

"Beginning at the south end of the land of Mdmle. Brackhuls, at a beech-tree standing near by the run; from thence W. by N. 20 chains, to a stake there standing; from thence N. 74° E. along the marked trees to a stake there standing, 90 chains; thence W. 74° N. along David Danielson's line, as the trees are marked, to a white-oak tree, marked on four sides, near by the run 112° . . . degrees south, along the run 30 chains; then N.N.E. along the run 23° to the place where it first began; containing 600 acres or thereabouts, with all," etc., etc., etc. The original deed is held by Nicholas Kipp, late of Preakness, now of Chicago, Ill.

* These are a few wills of the family which the author has consulted, or met with, in the preparation of this work. Of course there are many more, but the material needed was more easily obtained from other sources. All the ante-Revolutionary wills of the State of New-York, south of Albany County, are now deposited in New-York City.

The De Kype family was settled for a long time near Alençon, Bretagne, France. Ruloff was a Romanist, and in the triumph of the Protestants, under Condé, in 1562, his chateau was taken and burned. He and his three sons lived in Holland under an assumed name. In 1569, Ruloff, with his son Henri, reëntered France, and fell in battle on the banks of La Charente, near Jarnac, March 13th. His son Jean Baptiste, a priest, secured his burial in a neighboring church, where an altar tomb was erected to his memory, both of which were destroyed in the French Revolution. The inscription mentioned him as Ruloff De Kype, Ecuyer, (entitled to coat armor,) and was surmounted by his arms, with two crests, one a gamecock, the other a demi-griffin, holding a cross. The arms were pictured in the stained glass window of the Dutch Church in New-York City, built in 1640. They were also carved in stone over the door of the Kips Bay house, which was erected in 1655. The motto was, “ Vestigia nulla retrorsum.”

Of Ruloff's three sons, Henri entered the army of an Italian prince, where he spent his life, and died unmarried. Jean Baptiste was a Roman priest, and Ruloff settled at Amsterdam, Holland, and became a Protestant. He was born in 1544, and died in 1596, and left one son, Hendrik, born 1576. He married Margaret de Marneil. After the failure of the effort to find a north-eastern route to Asia, (pp. 49, 257,) the company, of which he was a member, employed Hendrik Hudson in 1609, who, in the Half-Moon, discovered Hudson River.

Ch. John, Charles, Rev. James, Elizabeth, Henry, Samuel, Rev. William S., Mary, Lucina, Louis M.

He removed from York District, South-Carolina, to Warwick County,

Indiana, in 1815. Being an anti-slavery man even at that early time, he did not wish to train up his children in the South. His father's family records were destroyed in the Revolutionary War, (see Bartholomew, 1, p. 18;) and James's father dying in 1772, when James was only two years old, the descendants have lost the traditions of the family, only being able to say that they emigrated from New-Jersey about the beginning of the Revolution, and that this James had an uncle, Richard Corwine, remaining in New-Jersey; also that the mother of James was a Mary Barron, (or widow Rowan,) who long survived her first husband, marrying a second time a John Pinkerton, in York District, S. C. Mr. P. was also a Revolutionary soldier under Generals Morgan and Green. Hence James is probably of the Hunterdon Co., N. J., Corwine family, which went to New-Jersey from Massachusetts in 1717. Now, there was a John, No. (2), p. 127, of this New-Jersey family, whose descendants moved to Baltimore, Md., at an unknown date. This John (4) the writer would suggest as the probable father of James, (4.) (See Curwen's Journal and Letters, Edition of 1864, p. 4.)

The following children of James (4) are divided, some spelling their name Corwine and some Corwin, but the writer does not know which follow the one spelling or the other:
